A Billion Dollar Target.
Chicago's Big Gain.
Pope Pius Will Broadcast.
18,000 Foot Building.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ON THE ferry from Jersey City to Liberty street early yesterday you saw flocks of airplanes above the money district reaching from the East to the North rivers and from the Battery to Canal street.

Lazily floating in the air above the water were two big blimps, and the Navy's giant Los Angeles.

LATER you learned that New York was bombed, skyscrapers and banks destroyed by 132 military planes, and most interesting, the Navy's great fleet parading below had been sent to the bottom of the water.

That was theoretical. But if it had been real war there would have been no theory. Instead, a great city and fleet wiped out.

IF 132 PLANES, one dirigible and two blimps could work such havoc what could a real fighting air fleet do, such as the French fleet for instance, with 5,000 airships.

HOWEVER, men learn slowly. When the automobiles first appeared, one misguided person bought Andrew Freedman's almost brand new Brewster hansom cab at a bargain and never put a horse in front of it. Chickens roost on it to this day.

CHAIRMAN Britten, of the House Naval Committee, wants to spend one billion dollars for more floating ships.

What nice targets such a fleet would offer to airmen twenty thousand feet up.

"NEARLY complete" according to the Chicago Herald and Examiner, the census figures give the big city more than 3,350,000 inhabitants.

That is a gain of 648,000 since the last census and almost 100,000 more than Chicago's Association of Commerce expected.

AND CHICAGO hasn't "shown anything yet." Wait until five thousand hydroplanes coming from Europe on one side, Asia on the other, drop daily on the smooth waters of Lake Michigan. That is coming and then Chicago will have a real population, spreading to Milwaukee on one side, Gary on the other.

POPE PIUS who has installed a broadcasting station in the vatican will, according to an Associated Press dispatch, initiate the use of the station with a personal address sent to the faithful everywhere.

That scientific miracle would have amazed the ancient popes.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, in pleasant optimism, says 1930 will be a year of normal progress. "Business is better today than it was six or nine months ago," says he.

ENGINEERS in Mr. Schwab's organization figuring out stress bearing and weight carrying capacity of steel construction, say it is mechanically possible to build a skyscraper 18,000 feet high. Such a building would have 1,800 stories, and require a large base.

WITH modern building conditions, all the ground floor space in the buildings would be needed for elevators.

But human intelligence will overcome that, and Mr. Otis, of elevator fame, is working now on the problem of multiple elevators in one shaft.

THIS WRITER once rode in such an elevator in London. It moved slowly, the cars attached in an endless chain, that turned around and came down without turning upside down.

An inventive mind could make a fortune with endless chains of express and slow elevators.

The express elevators to stop at every tenth or twentieth floor, not to start again until all operators had signaled "safe." In some way it will be done. What man can imagine, he can do.

TOMORROW will be Mother's Day. For a man fortunate enough to have his mother, there should be 365 mother's days, every year, and 366 in leap years.

A man needing to be reminded of his mother by her "day" might remember that the best present is something pretty.

Don't imitate the farmer and his two sons, who once a year, on her birthday, bought mother a new ax to cut wood.

TOWN FIRED, NEGROES FLEE MOB

Hidden Prisoner Roasted by Lynchers in Vault, Door Blasted; Terror Reigns

SHERMAN, Tex., May 10.—(AP.)—One of the maddest mobs in the history of the Southwest continued its orgy of destruction into the early morning today after burning the courthouse to end the life—by fire or blasts—of a Negro, George Hughes.

The Negro's attack on a white woman kindled the mob spirit to white heat, inspiring the wrecking of three blocks of buildings in the Negro section.

After firing once in self defense, militiamen retired.

Not satisfied with the Negro's death, the mob burned the body of the 41-year-old offender, set fire to a large building in the Negro section and threatened to destroy every other Negro building in this city of 16,000 population.

MORE TROOPS HALT TERROR

The reign of terror ended here today with the arrival of 300 additional National Guardsmen, who promptly arrested 12 alleged leaders of the riot.

The straggling remnants of the mob were standing around watching the embers of numerous in-

KREMER PICKED TO TURN TIDE

Added to their sick woes, the Pirates now have a slab collapse on their hands. As the Ensmen prepared to meet the Robins this afternoon in the second game of the current series, they realized they had only two victories to show in eight clashes with Eastern clubs.

Pie Traynor had to leave the lineup yesterday after taking part in three games. Pie's eye specialist ordered him out.

Remy Kremer and Jim Elliott, the latter a big lefthander, are slated to fight it out on the mound today.

Sets Altitude Mark For U. S. With Load

NEW YORK, May 10.—(INS.)—A new American altitude record with load was recorded today, following a flight by Boris Sergievsky, former Russian pilot, in which he flew a dead weight of 1,100 pounds to a height of 26,000 feet. The world record is 27,749 feet, held by Germany.

W. H. Vanderbilts Resume Honeymoon

NEWPORT, R. I., May 10.—Mr. and Mrs. William M. Vanderbilt, whose honeymoon was interrupted last December because of his duties as state senator in Rhode Island, are making a motor trip along the California coast, to be followed by a voyage to Honolulu.

Heat Relief For City Not In Sight

Pittsburgh will get no relief from the heat wave today, according to Weather Forecaster W. S. Brotzman. The prediction was that the mercury would continue to hover between 85 and 87. In Western Ohio, showers are expected to send the thermometer down slightly. Snow fell in Wyoming yesterday.

SIGN TAXI PACT; WAR GOES ON

Although representatives of the Parmelee Transportation Company and the executive committee of its striking drivers last night reached terms of agreement, pending approval by a mail vote of the men, Pittsburgh's four months' old taxicab strike was fa from settled today.

Hardly had the agreement been signed, than violence was renewed, two drivers being injured and a cab burned.

Harry Smith, 28, of 2 Ross street, driver of a Yellow cab, was pulled from his cab by nine men and beaten at Banksville and Crane roads early today. He was left along the roadside, while several of the men drove the cab half a mile down Banksville road and set fire to it.

Smith had been engaged at Pennsylvania Station to take a fare to Banksville.

Hoover, Jr., Likely To Head Air Firm

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP.)—Several Chicago stockholders of the newly-organized Aeronautical Radio, Inc., said today that Herbert Hoover, Jr., would probably be elected president of the corporation at the meeting here Monday.

The new corporation, in which is represented a large percentage of all the aviation concerns of the country, will function as a communications service for pilots and the companies employing them.

Young Plan Now In Active Operation

PARIS, May 10.—(INS.)—The Young plan, formulated by Owen D. Young to succeed the Dawes reparations plan, was actively functioning today after the signing of the protocol at the French foreign office yesterday afternoon. Ambassadors of Italy, England and Belgium and the French premier, Aristide Briand, signed the final documents.

MRS. M'CORMICK SAYS FIGHT ON LEAGUE WON

Shatters Foe's Attempts to Scorn Court Platform as Issue of Senatorial Vote

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Ruth Hanna McCormick last night sounded a keynote of American independence as against foreign entanglements when she declared she was swept to victory in the Illinois primary election on her opposition to the League of Nations Court.

She branded as "propaganda" attempts to warn senators not to let the ringing anti-court pronouncement of Illinois encourage them to vote against League Court adherence.

COURT REAL ISSUE

Mrs. McCormick broadcast her address nation-wide over the Columbia network.

"I made my objections to American adherence to the Court the major issue of my campaign," she declared.

In every corner of the state she campaigned against the League Court. She defeated her opponent, Senator Charles S. Deneen, by over 200,000 votes for the Republican senatorial nomination.

It was on the League Court issue Mrs. McCormick emphasizes.

The verdict of the voters of the great state of Illinois registered against the League Court and

DENIES KINSHIP TO IRENE

SAPULPA, Okla., May 10.—Creek County officials today await information from Pennsylvania police relative to a man under arrest here as Tom Crawford, brother of Irene Schroeder, under sentence of death in New Castle, Pa., for the murder of a state highway patrolman.

The prisoner, who denies he is Crawford, answers the description of the fugitive, who vanished with his sister and Glenn Dague at the time of the slaying. The latter two were captured near Phoenix, Ariz., several weeks later.

Fingerprints of the man under arrest have been sent to New Castle and to the National Bureau of Identification in Washington, where they will be compared with those of Crawford, taken when he was in the United States Army.

Scars on the hands and ankle of the man under arrest tally with those in the description of Crawford, the sheriff's office announced.

Wales Won't Visit Newport, Aide Says

LONDON, May 10.—(INS.)—Official denial that the Prince of Wales would attend the America cup yacht races off Newport, Rhode Island, was made here today by the prince's secretary.

BLUE LAW POLL STILL 10 TO 1 FOR REPEAL

Volume of Balloting Increases on Third Day; Modificationists Trail

The increasing volume of ballots cast in the Blue Law poll of Pittsburgh by the Sun-Telegraph caused the tally for the third day to double the total of votes in the poll.

The additional figures make practically no change in the relative standing of the three questions, continuing the ratio of 10 voters favoring repeal to one voter supporting the present law, while the modificationists still run third.

More votes were received for the third day of tabulation than during the first two days, increasing the total to 2,649 votes cast, divided as follows:

For the Blue Laws	218
For modification	163
For repeal	2,268

The day's returns aggregated 1,395, with 112 voters favoring the Blue Laws, 93 for modification and 1,190 for repeal.

The division between men and women voters in the total to date is: For the Blue Laws, 151 men and 67 women; for modification, 74 men and 89 women; for repeal, 1,675 men and 593 women.

Postcard ballots have been mailed to approximately 25 per cent of the voters in each ward and registered voters who have complained that they have not received ballots are among the 75 per cent remaining to be canvassed.

Returns of the Philadelphia Blue Law poll to date include 108,286 votes. For the Blue Laws, 21,064; for modification, 6,377; for repeal, 80,845. One hundred and fifty thousand ballots are yet to be sent out.

MOSLEM-HINDU CLASH FEARED

BOMBAY, India, May 10.—(AP.)—Unusual protective measures were put in force throughout India today to prevent communal rioting between Hindus and Moslems on the occasion of the Mohammedan Feast of Bakrid, in commemoration of Abraham's sacrifice of the lamb.

With Hindu-Moslem antipathies greatly accentuated by reason of Moslem abstinence from the civil disobedience campaign, there was particular apprehension.

In Sholapur, scene of rioting, in which casualty estimates ranged from 13 to 50 dead and 25 to 400 wounded, an order was issued forbidding assembly of more than five persons. This applied only to Hindus, and not to Moslems celebrating Bakrid.

Abbas Tyabji, retired high court justice of the native state of Baroda, who has taken the imprisoned Mahatma Gandhi's place at the head of the civil disobedience campaign, announced that he will march Monday from Karadi Matvad to Dharsaana, where, on Thursday, he will raid the government-operated salt depots.

The "passive" resistance policy of Gandhi was teetering toward open revolt. Word that the British government was ready to throw 200,000 men into the Indian arena if occasion should warrant it apparently was accepted with bland indifference by the natives.

CENSUS GAIN IN 10 YEARS 74,758

Large Movement to Suburbs Offsets Old Ward Losses; Annexation Given Credit

Pittsburgh's population, according to the census of 1930, completed today with the exception of two districts, is 663,101.

This figure includes an estimated 3,000 from the missing districts in the Fourth and Fourteenth Wards.

The population in 1920 was 588,343.

ANNEXATION CREDITED

The increase since the census of 1920 has been largely the result of the annexation of adjoining boroughs and townships. Half the wards of the city showed slight decreases and in only five of the old wards has there been a marked increase in the city's growth.

The percentage of increase is the lowest in the city's history, but there has been a correspondingly large movement toward the suburbs, the returns showing extraordinarily high percentages of increase in the North Boroughs districts, the South Hills and the Swissvale-Edgewood section. The banner wards are the Fourteenth, the Nineteenth and the Twenty-seventh.

COUNTY GAIN LARGE

The supervisors, who are rapidly completing the returns for the county, declared today that the county would show a material increase in all the residential districts and that this would offset the disappointing showing made by the city. It proves, they said, that the population is moving toward the open air of the suburbs.

Greenville Gains, But Farrell Loses

SHARON, Pa., May 10.—Complete unofficial returns on the 1930 census shows that Farrell's population is smaller and Greenville's larger than in 1920. Farrell will have 14,359 residents for 1930, as compared with 15,586 in 1920, and Greenville has 8,629, as compared with 8,161.

The outcome of the census-taking in Sharon is being awaited with much interest. Many predict the city will reach the 30,000 mark.

New Kensington Has 5,000 Census Gain

NEW KENSINGTON, May 10.—New Kensington gained almost 5,000 in population in the last 10 years, preliminary census figures made public show. The borough had a population of 11,987 in 1920 and now is 16,742.

Stimson Discards Clubs Saved by Reed

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP.)—It seems as if Mr. Stimson has other means of keeping fit, now that the naval conference is over. In London he exercised with Indian clubs and forgot to bring them home. Senator Reed delivered them to him, and the Secretary promptly gave them away.

Miss Hollins Shares Oil Fortune With Friends

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—(AP.)—The Examiner says Marion Hollins, former women's national golf champion, who recently made a fortune in the Kettleman Hills oil field, has arranged to give $50,000 of it to two friends with whom she made a "sportsman's agreement" two years ago.

Miss Hollins, whose remuneration from the recent sale of the Kettleman Oil Company is said to total somewhere between $1,500,000 and $2,500,000, was asserted to have made the agreement with Eric Pedley, noted polo player, and a woman whose identity was not learned. The agreement was that whichever of these three first acquired $1,000,000 would give each of the other $25,000.

The newspaper said Miss Hollins yesterday telegraphed Pedley Los Angeles and the third per in the agreement that the $25,0 checks were on the way.

MRS. M'CORMICK HOLDS VICTORY WON BY LEAGUE FIGHT

SAYS COURT WAS CHIEF ISSUE

against foreign entanglements Mrs. McCormick declared, shows a trend which is of national significance.

"The opinion of Illinois is not lightly to be considered either in the councils of our national leaders, nor in the chancelleries beyond the seas," she said.

'PROPAGANDA'

Revealing the intrigues of League Court propaganda, Mrs. McCormick specifically referred to the recent letter of Samuel Colcord, of New York, distributed to the press and addressed to Vice President Curtis.

The letter, claiming to be sponsored by a long list of prominent persons, declared the League Court issue played an insignificant part in Mrs. McCormick's record-breaking victory.

"An example of propaganda," declared Mrs. McCormick.

"Mr. Colcord, who gained some fame years ago as a defender of the League of Nations, began his letter to Vice President Curtis with the following paragraph:

"'I am addressing you as the appropriate recipient of a message that may be of interest to all our senators.'

STAND WELL KNOWN

"Mr. Colcord's letter would be amusing if it did not show such a serious misunderstanding of facts and implications involved in the Illinois election of April 8.

"He undertakes to demonstrate that the approximately 700,000 men and women who voted for me did not thus indicate approval of my opposition to adherence to the court.

"I spoke to audiences in 100 Illinois counties, repeating the argument again and again. My campaign literature, consisting of hundreds of thousands of letters and pamphlets, stated my opposition to the court.

"During the last two weeks of the campaign I used the radio.

"My opponent in the contest had voted for the Court in 1926, and he accepted the issue in his first campaign speech in Illinois.

"I do not believe that an issue has ever been more clearly drawn and more thoroughly discussed than was this Court issue in the Illinois primary.

"On election day I received approximately 700,000 votes which was about 210,000 more than were given to my opponent. This was the largest majority ever given to a candidate for the United States Senate in an Illinois primary.

"The Chicago Daily News, which is a pro-Court newspaper, said editorially on the day after election:

"'Mrs. McCormick has won a notable victory. Its repercussion in Washington will strengthen opposition to ratification by the Senate of the national administration's action in signing the World Court protocol.'

"The Chicago Journal of Commerce, another pro-court newspaper, said editorially:

"'The only clear distinction between the candidates seemed to be the World Court issue and on that the voters decided.'

"Those are two of many newspaper opinions which should command consideration.

"United States Senators Pittman, Watson, leader of the majority in the Senate; Borah, Glenn and Copeland were among those members of the Senate who immediately said that the Illinois vote was a significant declaration against adherence to the League Court.

DIFFERS ON ISSUES

"The Colcord letter, however, seeks to show that Illinois newspapers, the distinguished members of the Senate and the 690,000 Illinois voters know little or nothing about what was going on in Illinois. Mr. Colcord seeks to show that the main issue was the wet and dry question, although that was not in dispute between my opponent and myself.

"This letter of Mr. Colcord's, presuming to analyze expertly the thoughts in the backs of the minds of the Illinois voters, is signed by 60 men and women of outstanding prominence in the United States.

"I wonder how many, if any, of these men and women made even a casual analysis of the Illinois primary vote before they signed Mr. Colcord's letter. If they made no such analysis, how could they indorse Mr. Colcord's 'statement of facts'?

WOMEN'S PART IMPORTANT

"The women of Illinois have a genuine and intelligent interest in their foreign relations. Their vote in the recent primary was a significant factor in the result.

"As I said in the last speech of the campaign, 'our ignorance, if we are to be called ignorant, is limited to an inability to understand the intrigues and shifting alliances of European nations, particularly with reference to any demand that we shall become involved in them. Our prejudice, if our patriotic passion for peace and independence may be so called, is a prejudice against departing from the counsel of Washington and Jefferson and Lincoln.'

"My friends, when Illinois decides that it is irreconcilable on any international question, that decision must be respected as one based upon a sincere love of country."

LYNCHERS FIRE NEGRO TOWN, COW TROOPS

TOWN'S NEGROES VANISH

The Negro had been imprisoned in the courthouse vault by officers who sought to save his life.

A quota of 60 or 70 guardsmen from Dallas, who earlier yesterday had been helpless to stem the orgy of violence, was given a respite from gruelling hours of battling with the infuriated citizens bent upon revenge upon the Negro who confessed assaulting a young farm wife near here.

With the dawning of day guardsmen and rangers rounded up several hundred frightened Negroes who had taken refuge in brush thickets on the outskirts of Sherman. They were herded back to their homes.

Stores in the city opened for business, and a few Negroes reported for work.

Not a Negro had been seen in the town since 2 p. m. yesterday, although Sherman claimed a Negro population of 1,500 to 2,000.

COURT HOUSE BURNED

The first contingent of soldiers was forced to fortify itself in the county jail after several persons, both soldiers and rioters, had been injured, in a clash before the jail.

Hughes died from suffocation, burning or from the impact of an explosion.

The cause may never be determined.

The mob formed yesterday afternoon when he was to go to trial, demanded him from guarding officers, and when refused, set fire to the Courthouse in which the Negro was in the custody of officers.

The Negro was held prisoner in a vault on the second floor of the Courthouse.

Unable to reach the prisoner, mob leaders decided to burn him even though their vengeance cost the county a $60,000 Courthouse.

MOB BATTLES SOLDIERS

The fire started early in the afternoon. Night came with no letup in rioting. The mob refused to believe the sheriff, who pledged that the Negro had been left in the vault, after being given the choice of staying there or running for his life.

Missiles were thrown at the soldiers. One private was hit over the head with a 2x4 timber and dangerously hurt.

Then the soldiers, in self-defense, fired. About a score were injured in the fighting that followed.

At this juncture the guardsmen, rather than shoot anyone else, retired to the jail and did not disturb the mob further.

VAULT BLASTED

Balked in their attempt to get into the jail, the mob returned to the charred courthouse, determined definitely to ascertain whether the Negro was in the vault.

Blast after blast was set off. An acetylene torch was used.

Finally, just before midnight, a hole was cut through the two outer casings, and the door of the inner casing blown off with a heavy charge of dynamite.

One observer of this incident, who afterwards examined the vault—Joe Leonard, managing editor of the Gainesville (Tex.) Register—expressed belief that Hughes had lived through the excruciating heat of the fire and still was alive when the final blast was shot.

The Negro's head was battered in. Apparently he had been struck by the falling door.

NEGRO QUARTERS FIRED

Through the streets of the Negro section they dragged their load and the journey ended at a large Negro store which housed a drug store, beauty shop, undertaking parlor, tailor shop and other enterprises.

The body was strung to a tree and boxes piled beneath.

A fire was lighted. Then the drug store was set afire and a brilliant Texas moon added its rays to the gruesome sight.

After virtually destroying the drug store the mob surged down a three-block section of the Negro district, a stampede of humanity run amuck. Clubs, bricks and bottles were hurled against windows and doors.

Virtually every store was entered and its interior wrecked.

Every Negro had disappeared, and it was reported that scores of them left the city early in the evening.

Hundreds of curious persons invaded Sherman early in the evening, and until an early hour today the highways leading from the city were solid strings of automobiles, carrying the curiosity-satiated visitors back to their beds.

DEPORTATION DRIVE FACED BY REDS

$25,000 Sought in House to Expedite Ridding Away Of Undesirable Aliens

By WILLIAM S. NEAL, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Request for a deficiency appropriation to meet the cost of deporting aliens, and a drive to tighten up the deportation laws will be the first results of the anti-communism agitation in the House, it appeared today.

Testimony of Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, of New York, furnished the House Immigration Committee with new ammunition, and the House is expected soon to authorize a special committee investigation of communistic agitation and propaganda throughout the country.

16,000 DEPORTED

The Labor Department, it became known, will have deported 16,000 aliens in the fiscal year ending June 30.

Representative Johnson (Rep.), of Washington, chairman of the House Immigration Committee, said Whalen's testimony will result in a new examination of deportation laws by his committee.

The government faces two big obstacles in its deportation program, Johnson said. Because the United States does not recognize Russia, persons cannot be deported there unless Russia is willing to receive them. Also, immigrants who entered the country unlawfully more than five years ago cannot be naturalized and cannot be deported. If they entered before 1924, the burden of proof of showing illegal entry is upon the government.

Whalen's refusal to give the House committee details of his recent charges that officials of the Amtorg Corporation, Russian Soviet commercial agency of New York, and representatives of the Third International of Moscow, are fomenting Communistic agitation, proved a disappointment.

Documents produced by Whalen to support his statements have been denounced as forgeries by representatives of the Amtorg Corporation.

brick hurled through the windshield of his cab in the 3100 block of Bigelow boulevard late last night. He was taken to Mercy Hospital.

AGREEMENT SIGNED

The agreement was signed late last night by Walter S. Laird, vice president of the Parmelee Transportation Company, and Alec J. Sifford, chairman of the strikers' committee.

The Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's Catholic Church and chaplain of the strikers' committee, was named chairman to supervise the balloting. The ballots are to be mailed back to the Rev. Albert E. Day, pastor of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, who is to act as custodian. The ballots will be counted and the result announced May 15.

The agreement provides that the company will reinstate all drivers who were on the payroll January 12, without discrimination or prejudice to any drivers now belonging to or who in the future join any labor organization.

Restoration of seniority rights and 37½ per cent commission will be paid the drivers. Any driver returning to work prior to June 10 will be paid a bonus of $2.50 a day in addition to his commission for the first seven days' work after his return.

SETTLE GRIEVANCES

Taxicab operations will be scheduled on the basis of 10 hours a day, six days a week. Deposits for tools, fines and deductions of any kind for equipment, formerly required, have been entirely eliminated.

Drivers' grievances which cannot be satisfactorily adjusted by the drivers with garage superintendents will be taken up with the vice president of the company either by the drivers personally or through a representative who is an employe.

The companies have agreed to use every effort to stop any litigation instituted against any of their drivers or their representatives now pending.

If a majority of the votes cast favor the proposal, service under the agreement will start at noon the day following the counting of the ballots. Until the ballots are tallied the company will continue taxicab operation.

No distinction will be made between drivers who return to work on the day following the approval of the agreement and those who return any time up until June 10.

RUMP MEETING HELD

While the committee was in conference late yesterday afternoon an effort was made to disrupt its deliberations by Jack Tait, former taxicab driver, who went into the meeting and called on the men to abandon negotiations and join the Trades Union Unity League, affiliated with the Communist party. He was asked to leave the meeting by the committeemen.

Tait today announced that a group of drivers would meet Monday at 2:30 o'clock to renew their demand for an agreement allowing the men 40 per cent of receipts and recognition of their union.

Tait told newspapermen that "a rump meeting had been held by 500 drivers at Seventeenth street and that they had voted not to accept any terms except 40 per cent and a closed shop. Other than Tait's statement for it, this information could not be verified. Tait was beaten up at the melee which occurred when the Back to Work Committee and the strikers clashed at Moose Temple a month ago.

WELFARE CREW ON STRIKE

Fifty helpers on trucks of the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, Duquesne way and Stanwix street, were holdouts today because of what they termed a reduction in pay without notice.

Refusing to accompany 12 trucks which left the association's building, the men loitered in an alley in the rear, awaiting a conference. They asserted they had received only $2 last night for a week's work gathering rags and paper, whereas they usually received more than $5.

Harry W. Shepard, superintendent, said the men were given only temporary employment, free lodging, board and washing until they could obtain permanent jobs. Spending money allowed depended on the paper market, he said.

POLITICAL ROW HEARING SET

A full day has been set aside by Judge Thomas J. Ford, in Quarter Sessions Court, to hear evidence in the First Ward political fray over the removal of William Duncan and Ross Talamo as deputy constables in Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan's office.

John Schneider, the constable upon whose petition their appointment was confirmed by the court over a year ago, is petitioning to have their appointments revoked.

Petitions and answers, and amended petitions and amended answers have been filed, and partial hearings held, the case finally resolving itself yesterday into a matter of the court hearing evidence upon the fitness of the deputies to serve.

Judge Ford said to the attorneys:

"If you want to persuade the court that you are asking what is wise and prudent you will have to prove it by testimony, and I will continue this hearing until next Friday morning so we will have the entire day to listen to your evidence."

Schneider, through Attorney B. Robert Averbach, charges the deputies have improperly conducted themselves. The deputies, through Attorney William H. Coleman, deny this. Alderman Flanigan sides with the deputies against the constable.

ALTOONA, Pa., May 10.—(AP.)—Gifford Pinchot, at 64, laid claim yesterday to a one-day "stumping" record as he carried his campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination over 250 miles from Erie to Altoona.

The trip was marred by an accident to one automobile of the cavalcade near DuBois. The Rev. John Golden, Philipsburg, suffered fractures of both jaws and W. A. Question of Lady Astor's Age Stirs House Uproar

LONDON, May 10.—(AP.)—The question of Lady Astor's age caused an uproar in the House of Commons after an exchange of compliments between the American-born peeress and Capt. H. F. Crookshank, Conservative.

Capt. Crookshank spoke in opposition to Lady Astor's private bill to remove children of barge captains on English canals at the age of five in order to give them [illegible] education ashore.

[illegible] with Lady Astor interrupted him with a remark that he was the [illegible] apart [illegible] citie[illegible] greatest "obstructionist" in the House in t[illegible]

Capt. Crookshank, replying, jokingly sought protection of the chair, saying that Lady Astor ought to know better than to make such an accusation because she had been in the House longer than he and was much older than he.

An uproar of hisses, catcalls and cheers followed. The captain was accused of want of gallantry. Lady Astor does not state her age in "Who's Who," but she was married in 1897, four years after Capt. Crookshank was born.

Firemen Continue Oxygen Fight to Save Babies

Turtle Creek and New Kensington firemen were at the bedside of babies in ther respective communities today making grim fights to restore to health two victims of pneumonia. Both are expected to reach the crisis tomorrow.

Fire Chief E. D. Kenyon and several Turtle Creek firemen were at the bedside of Agnes Fry, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Fry, of 129 Church street. New Kensington firemen continued their battle, begun Wednesday, to help Richard, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Harkins, of 527 Ridge avenue.

"I want to see daddy!" exclaimed wee Agnes after Chief Kenyon and his men had been pumping oxygen through inhalators into the child's lungs for three and a half hours early today.

Oxygen was being pumped into the lungs of both children for five minutes every 25-minute period. Members of the Harkins household relieved firemen from their task shortly after last midnight, but the men were back at Richard's bedside less than eight hours later.

The Turtle Creek firemen were called to the Fry home late last night. They planned to keep up their work until the attending physician, Dr. David Trevaskis announced Agnes had passed the crisis.

BARES CHARGES AGAINST FOUR BISHOPS

Preacher Declares Fight On Catholics in South Violated Methodist Law

WASHINGTON, Ga., May 10.—(AP.)—The Rev. Rembert G. Smith, Southern Methodist preacher here, today disclosed charges he had made against four bishops of the church because of "unwarranted" political activities in 1928.

Smith charged Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Edwin D. Mouzon and John M. Moore with violation of a church rule laid down in Baltimore in 1784 providing equal political rights for Roman Catholic citizens in line with the Constitution of the United States. He added Bishop H. M. DuBose to the list.

SMITH'S STATEMENT

His statement in part follows:

"The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in session at Dallas, Texas, has responsibilities heavier than any borne by any of its predecessors since 1866, when the conference met in New Orleans and made plans for the progress of the church. It was very difficult by reason of the disorganization and distress in the South due to the havoc of reconstruction after the Civil War.

BACKED G. O. P.

"In 1928, Bishops Cannon, Mouzon, Moore and DuBoise went into aggressive political activity in the interest of Mr. Hoover and the Republican party, alleging this was required in order to defend prohibition.

"The general conference now in session, to which these four bishops are responsible, will have to approve or disapprove their political utterances and activities, unprecedented until 1928 in the history of the church, since it came into being in 1846, after having been rent asunder in New York City in 1844, as a result of political agitation over slavery.

ATTACKED SMITH

"In the campaign of 1928 Bishops Cannon, Mouzon and Moore attacked Gov. Smith, the nominee of the Democratic party, not only because he favored modification of the dry laws, but also because he was a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

"This was an incendiary innovation and a nullification of the Constitution of American Methodism which since the Christmas conference in Baltimore in 1784 has approved giving equal political rights to Roman Catholic citizens as provided in the Constitution of the United States."

REED MOVES TO AVERT FIGHT

Southern Prohibitionists Disgruntled and Fear Anti-Dry Court Majority

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Rumblings of opposition from senatorial drys today threatened to involve the nomination of Owen J. Roberts, of Pennsylvania, in the same sort of fight that has accompanied President Hoover's two previous appointments to the Supreme Court.

Senate liberals gave indication a searching scrutiny would be given Roberts' record as counsel for large corporate interests, an issue that was raised against Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and figured in the rejection this week of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina.

But the main force of the threatened political storm seemed to revolve around Roberts' record on prohibition. Hardly had his position as an anti-dry been made known before Senator Morris Sheppard (Dem.), of Texas, who claims authorship of the Eighteenth Amendment, announced he would not support any anti-dry for the post.

REED AIDS ROBERTS

Subsequently Sheppard agreed to withhold judgment until he could look into the case more closely. The threat, however, had prospects of being augmented by dry southern elements disgruntled because the President had not submitted the name of another southerner, thus adhering to the traditional practice of maintaining geographical representation on the highest tribunal.

It was due largely to the efforts of Senator David A. Reed, of Pittsburgh, that Sheppard agreed to suspend judgment on the nomination. Reed telephoned Roberts at his Philadelphia home and asked him to clarify his prohibition attitude.

FEAR ANTI-DRY MAJORITY

The thing that seems to worry senatorial drys is that he is the second anti-dry President Hoover has nominated for the Supreme Court in two months. More particularly, his confirmation would give prohibition opponents a majority on the tribunal.

Excerpts from a speech made by Roberts at a dinner in New York in 1923 stirred the prohibition issued. He was quoted as saying he was "not an advocate of prohibition" and denounced the Eighteenth Amendment as the insertion of a "policy (or police) regulation" into the Constitution, reducing it to the status of a city ordinance.

CITE PARKER DRY STAND

It was charged on the floor by suporters of Judge Parker that the underlying opposition to him was because he was a dry.

Belief was expressed by drys the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment had "planted" the labor and Negro issues. The charge was given some credence in view of testimony before the Lobby Committee by H. S. Curran, head of the anti-prohibitionists, that the Supreme Court is where they expect to get relief.

Senators Borah and Norris seemed pleased when they heard of the nomination, but their enthusiasm cooled when it developed that in the last three years Roberts has won three victories before the Supreme Court on the very issue on which they based their opposition to Chief Justice Hughes and Judge Parker.

LAW WORK SCANNED

Strangely enough, one was in the same human interest story which was widely published by the opponents of Hughes, the so-called Baizley case.

Senator Reed, in discussing the appointment, said:

"I think he will be confirmed without a fight."

Reed said when he went to present the name of Robert Von Moschzisker, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, he was informed President Hoover desired to make an appointment which would be instantly acceptable to the country at large, and for that reason sought a man who was widely known. Asked his opinion of Roberts, Senator Reed said he told the President he thought Roberts would be a fine choice.

SPUR TO TARIFF SOUGHT TODAY

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The Senate and House tariff conferees were called together today for action on a program designed to bring the long controversy over the Smoot-Hawley bill to a close.

This plan, already approved by the Republican members of the conference committee, provided that the silver duty and the Blease amendment to allow free importation of cement for public construction be stricken from the bill and the lumber tariff and the provisions of the administrative sections still in dispute be returned to the Senate for separate votes.

The administrative features in question—the export debenture plan and the legislative flexible clause—have been voted down by the House, which also disapproved any duty on lumber.

DANOVITZ AGAIN INDICTED

Ike Danovitz, a partner in the Feitler Bottle Company, whose appeal from his conviction in the Federal District Court for possessing counterfeit strip whisky stamps is pending before the United States Circuit Court, was indicted yesterday by the Federal grand jury in a case alleged to involve other counterfeit whisky stamps.

The appeal concerns a large quantity of bogus stamps seized by prohibition agents May 10, 1928, in the warehouse of the Feitler Bottle Company, Watson street. They also seized 57 truck loads of barrels, bottles and other property, which the United States Supreme Court this week held to have been legally confiscated, as property intended for use in violating the prohibition law.

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, on November 6, 1929, sentenced Danovitz to one year in the Atlanta Penitentiary, but the appeal acted as a supercedeas.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

To Serve as Bridesmaid In East

Pittsburgh folks are not the only ones, of course, who are succumbing to the alliance of Cupid and spring; so there're lots of weddings in the East, the South, and the West. And since Pittsburgh society is more allied to that in the East, more of our younger set are in demand in New York and Philadelphia as bridal attendants than in other cities of the States.

On June 23 there'll be a wedding in the East of interest here, that of Mary Tod Hunter Clark, daughter of the Percy Hamilton Clarks, of Willoughby, Cynwyd, Pa., to Nelson Aldricht Rockefeller, son of the junior John D. Rockefellers, of New York.

And one of the bridesmaids is a Pittsburgh girl, Genevieve Bell, daughter of the A. Marshall Bells, of Ridge avenue. The ceremony will take place in St. Asaph's Church, Bala, Pa., which members of the Clark family have attended all their lives.

Bride's Aides

The bride will have two matrons of honor, her sister, Mrs. Philip Wallis, formerly Miriam Clark, and Mrs. Robert Page, Jr. The bridesmaids will be Genevieve Bell and Mrs. David M. Milton, of New York, formerly Abby Rockefeller, sister of the bridegroom-to-be; Mrs. Beverly Coleman, of Washington; Gwendolyn Roberts and Eleanor Clark, first cousins of the bride; Laura Wayne, Catherine Clothier and Alice Lippincott, all of the Quaker City.

John D. Rockefeller, III, will be his brother's best man, and Percy H. Clark, Jr., and George Clark, brothers of the bride-elect; Lawrence and Winthrop Rockefeller, of New York, brothers of the bridegroom-elect; John French, Jr., of New York, Mr. Rockefeller's roommate at Dartmouth; Thatcher Brown, William Allen and Laurence Dickey, of New York; Stacy B. Lloyd, Jr., of Philadelphia, and William Cochran, of Baltimore.

After the wedding there'll be a reception in the home of the bride's father and mother.

Just now, the most thrilling news in the world of sports concerns the races. And of course many Pittsburgh folks are attending. Before the great Preakness race yesterday afternoon and evening at Pimlico there were many social events, including a luncheon the C. I. Theodore Goulds gave in honor of the Eri C. B. Goulds, of Edgerton avenue, in the old Hilltop Clubhouse. The Goulds are the week-end guests of Mrs. Littleton Purnell, of Baltimore, I might add.

Pimlico Races

To the races at Pimlico have gone the Richard Gundry Jenningses, of Sewickley, who will join the William C. Chaplins at Howell's Point, Md., and go to Baltimore.

Other Sewickleyans at the races are the Harry B Higginses, the James E. Leonards and the Ralph S. Richardses. And they all plan to return early next week.

Among the distinguished educators who have spoken before the College Club this year on the different types of present day colleges, is Dr. Frederick B. Lent, president of Elmira College, whose address yesterday, was on "The Classical or Liberal Arts College. Discussing the purpose, aim and use of such education, he defined the liberal arts college as one that taught nothing useful, did not fit for a vocation, but aimed for intellectual excellence. It is, he affirmed, not so much concerned with mere facts, but with a trained mind. The end sought is thought and reason exercised upon knowledge, resulting in a mind disciplined for its own sake. Believing that a cultivated intellect is the best aid to success, Dr. Lent advises the postponement of vocational training until there is a classical foundation. The talk aroused much interest and discussion upon the comparative value of classical and vocational courses in colleges.

Mrs. O. B. Hughes announced an extension of time until May 14 on the safety essay contest which the community service division is sponsoring under Mrs. D. Edwin Miller's chairmanship.

The speakers were Mrs. John M. Phillips, chairman of the home department of the federation; Mrs. Hughes, who is president of the Allegheny County Parent-Teacher Association and district chairman of the community service division; Miss Irene McDermitt, supervisor of home economics in the Pittsburgh schools; Miss Karen Fladoes, of the Philadelphia Company; Miss Laura Redick, of the Consumers' League; Miss Gwendolyn Shand, of International Institute; Mrs. C. C. Taylor, chairman of work for the blind in the federation, and John Ihlder, of the Pittsburgh Housing Association.

Mrs. Phillips stressed the need for greater moral and health safety and safety from accidents in the home. Miss Fladoes cautioned against overloading the circuits, called attention to the necessity for oiling household appliances and the danger of amateur wiring and of using frayed cords. She also told her audience to call the Philadelphia Company's first aid crew immediately in case of accident by shock.

Miss McDermitt explained what is being done to prevent accidents in the schools where there has never been a serious accident from fire, largely, she thinks, because the children know what to do to control fire and are not afraid of it. Miss Redick's talk was related to the protective steps taken for women in industry through the efforts of the Consumers' League and the many organizations with which it cooperates.

Mrs. Taylor talked on eye hazards; habit and occupational accidents, and accidents that happen from uncleanliness and darkness were spoken of by Mr. Ihlder; Mrs. Hughes asked that parents stand behind the children in carrying out safety measures taught them in school, and Miss Shand showed what there is to be done along safety lines among the foreign women.

Mrs. Miller asked Mrs. James Graham Chalfant, head of the Federation department of education, under which the community service division functions, to preside. Telegrams of regret and commendation were read from Mrs. John A. Frick, Federation head, and Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, a former General Federation president, who was prevented by illness from being present.

Elsie Breese Mitchell, with Mrs. Miller blossoming forth in a new capacity, that of accompanist, sang an amusing safety song and Mrs. Miller concluded the program with safety slides and a film. The women, at the request of Mrs. Mary J. Cowley, stood with bowed heads, honoring the memory of Daniel Winters.

THE BAND PLAYS IMPORTANT PART IN LATEST TRIMMINGS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, MAY 10.—The band still plays its part in the creating of the silhouette. Straight bands, intricately curved bands, diagonal bands, all have their well-defined place on both day and evening frocks, as well as suits and coats. These bands give the complex simplicity that is so essential in the garment of today, thus making it possible to wear the little frock at all hours during the day. Bands are used to give the necessary snugness to the hips, while curving bands lend the sweep and flare to the skirt, that is both good-looking and practical. Straight and diagonal bands are much used on coats and suits to lend interest to the cut and the silhouette, and give the necessary "dressmaker" touch that is so much sought after in a garment, for it bestows that unobtrusively expensive air that is so desirable.

AS AN example of the importance of the band in the building of a frock we show a sketch of an afternoon frock from Patou's latest collection. It is of black crepe Sokol with a neck finish and a jabot of embroidered lawn. A pink rose is worn at the top of the jabot. Intricate, curving bands, inlaid over the hips, sweep down in front and form deep pleats. The sleeves are bloused above the cuffs and decorated with set-in bands of the material which cross over one another.

THE other drawing depicts the charms of a very recent and attractive model from Worth's always distinguished and comprehensive collection. It is an ensemble consisting of a printed crepe frock with a design of chocolate-colored flowers on a white ground, worn with a shantung coat of matching brown. The dress has a scarf collar, fringed along the edge, and knotted in front. The rather wide, stitched belt is buckled in front. A narrow raveled fringe borders the circular skirt. The coat is quite simple, being full-length, straight of line, its only detail consisting of flaring pieces set on the lower part of the sleeve.

Lose Pound-a-Week Menu

DIET NO. 12

To reduce one pound a week a series of safe and sane diets have been prepared by Dr. A. I. Ringer, consultant on metabolism for the Medical Information Bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine. They are appearing daily in the Sun-Telegraph. Here is the twelfth and final diet for tomorrow:

BREAKFAST

One dish of canned peaches
Two hard-boiled eggs
Four tablespoonsful of cereal, without milk
Tea, one cup

LUNCH

Moderate portion filet of sole
Tomato salad
Thin slice of bread
Coffee, one cup

DINNER

One plate clear tomato soup
Moderate portion of roast ham
One boiled potato
Cabbage and apple salad
String beans
Coffee, one cup

Diet Hints

Water will not make you fat! The common notion that water drinking increases the weight is utterly false, says Dr. A. I. Ringer, consultant on metabolism for the Medical Information Bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Water doesn't offer any energy to the body. It merely acts as a means of dissolving materials which are to be absorbed and excreted from the body.

The average person needs a quart and a half of fluid a day, in Winter. In Summer, the amount depends on temperature and amount of perspiration. The more a man perspires, the more water he should drink.

Plenty of water should be drunk with the Sun-Telegraph daily reducing diets. No limit is placed on vegetables and fruits. Moderate helpings of meat and fish are recommended.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Will Durant, popular writer on philosophical subjects, points to the fact that there is less violence between man and woman, parent and child and teacher and pupil as an indication that the present time is the most moral in history. Do you agree with him?

ARTHUR SCHAI, New Rochelle: The older society becomes, the more refined it should become. I think there is no doubt that present-day society is more refined than that of say 100 years ago. Will Durant, like many of his kind, has committed errors, but I believe he is right this time.

Arthur Schai

HARRY HOWER, Squirrel Hill, student: Durant has the right idea. If what we read and hear about the old methods of educations is true the whip certainly played a part in the lives of those who sought knowledge. Then, too, husbands were strong men who often beat their wives. Now the wife does the beating.

Harry Hower

ALICE MAE LONG, Waynesburg, student: Yes, I believe Mr. Durant is correct in his contentions. I can see no reason why a person should doubt that our age is more advanced, civilized and human than those of the past. We practice correct morals even if we don't shout about it from the roofs.

Miss Long

NANCY MATTHEWS, Northumberland, student: I've read a good deal of Durant's works and find his philosophy to be as sound as any philosophy can be. When he makes a statement to the effect that the present time is the most moral in history he is saying something which we all know.

Miss Matthews

VIRGINIA EWALT, Greensburg: There is no doubt that there is less violence today than at any other time in the past. To me it seems that the less violence we have the more civilized we are becoming, so the only thing I can say is Mr. Durant knows what of he speaks.

Miss Ewalt

ERNIE HEIDERSBACH, Chicago: Yes, I agree with Mr. Durant. Our great army of rough-necks seems on the decrease. Just exactly why I don't know. Maybe education. Morals, as I understand morals, are better, although there is still a lot of rot in the world.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

That Winchell Person

New York's biggest-mouth and most notorious gossip, it appears, isn't something in skirts, at all. The town's greatest busybody and curse is a man, and so was Samuel Pepys (the Winchell of the Seventeenth Century) but that common scold was paid via the pillory route and not with corn.

The various articles in some of the better magazines about Walter Winchell always struck me as being sugared a lot, altered to interest the respectable subscribers, or prepared to please the vanity of the subject. So I walked into the Daily Mirror editorial rooms last night and cornered him.

"If you have any backbone at all," I said point blank, "you will permit me to interview you and clear up all this mackerel the magazines have space-wasted on you. Where were you born and why?"

"In New York, on April 7, 1897," he growled.

"Where were you schooled?"

"At P. S. 184, on 116th street, until I was thirteen," he replied stiffly (a well-known pose of his), "and I was expelled in grade 6B for being backward, having been left back in that class four times."

"Then you will admit," I challenged, "that you certainly have been pretty lucky, considering your numerous good breaks!"

"I do not think I have been lucky at all," he responded. "I have worked very hard, and whatever good breaks I've enjoyed I've deserved. And please don't misquote me."

"Oh, I see," I said. "You're getting a swelled-head?"

"No," he snapped, "I've always had one."

Which gives you a rough idea of the man.

Of course the interviewer who says that prejudice never enters into his writings, is a fabricator. I pause now to confess that I am naturally prejudiced against this chap Winchell. The moment I looked at him I got his number. So I set forth in this article my personal impressions. Winchell says he is 33. He was one of the obscure small-time entertainers up to 1922, having played now and then on the lesser-known vaudeville circuits. Once in the Grand Opera House in New York, I learn, his act was cancelled after the opening matinee because it was third-rate stuff.

During October, 1922, he says, he quit vaudeville. I prefer to believe that vaudeville quit him or made it so unbearable for him that he turned to journalism. Where it is only a question of time when the patience of those who employ him gives out and he goes back to his hoofing boots.

However he began his newspaper career for $25 weekly on a publication called The Vaudeville News, the editor, Glenn Coudon, now of Tulsa, Okla., teaching him the rudiments of the noble profession. In 1924, because the Park Row gods were kind, Winchell joined the staff of a new newspaper and became its Broadway compensator and dramatic critic. He is, he says, one of the highest salaried newspapermen in the world, which is a sad comment on American journalism.

He admits he is an illiterate. To quote Winchell: "Naturally when I first joined a newspaper I was worried sick for fear that the other newspapermen would kid me about my English and laugh me back into the show business. So to protect myself I turned to slang and tried to coin my own words. I did this successfully, for one afternoon about 5 o'clock I woke up and discovered that I was being hailed as a 'stylist!' "

Winchell, as anyone on Broadway or in New York will hasten to tell you, is unquestionably the town's most conceited peasant. Ask him what he thinks of the other columnists and he will say that some of them are good, but you can tell that he isn't sincere, and says so to answer the question. He will say in the same breath that were it not for him, several of his contemporaries would never have had the opportunity to elevate themselves. When I asked him if he ever met O. O. McIntyre, who did a column about New York long before he was out of his short bloomers, he grumbled that he never met Mr. McIntyre and hopes he never does, because when he meets people he's afraid he may get to like them and when he likes people he cannot write about them.

"It must be easier for you now," I remarked, "now that you are better known than you were five years ago."

"Not at all," he countered, "it is tougher. When I wasn't well known, and I didn't know the well-knowns intimately, I could write what I liked about them. Meeting the so-called celebrities and those who think they are celebrated has handcuffed me. They come to me with scandal about themselves and make me promise that I won't publish it. You can't have friends and write what peop' like to read about them, you know. And gossip, it appears, is most readable. Everybody is interested, so long as it isn't about them."

"You don't seem to like it when people talk about you?" I said. "You saw red when Ethel Barrymore gave you a piece of her mind."

"I didn't see red at all!" he thundered (he is very prima-donnaish and highly strung). "When people dislike me they have damn good reasons!"

I asked him if he thought his gossip column was in poor taste as some people have told him.

"It probably is," he said. "It is always distasteful, unless, of course, it is a compliment. The people who have been saluted by my pen think I'm a great little guy. Still, I know one or two of them who once wept their thanks to me for giving them a boost when they needed it most, but who hurled a knife at me when they learned how to fly."

"You don't really believe that your stuff is of any importance, do you? I mean you don't think it will live?"

"Of course not. But George Jean Nathan, who is good, too, once told me that I wrote a line that will go down in literature."

"You don't say!" I ejaculated. "What was that?"

"The line appeared in my gossip column and read: 'Gloria Winchell, the most beautiful child in the world, has the measles!' "

"Please don't get emotional," I urged.

"What do you think of Mark Hellinger?" I added.

"He's very pretty, but not as pretty as Gladys Glad."

"Who is your favorite author?"

"Forrest Wilson. He has written the greatest short story ever written. It is in the June issue of Cosmopolitan."

"Who is your favorite actor?"

"Walter Winchell," he admitted.

"And your favorite press agent?"

"Ethel Barrymore, the woman who talks like a man."

WELL MADE PICTURE DISPLAYS EX-WIFE IN THE PENN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Ursula Parrot's ex-wife is a "nicer" lady in the movies than she is in the book. For one thing, she goes back to her original husband at the picture's fadeout, instead of chasing to Europe with that fellow, Nathaniel. For another, there are not as many men in her screen life as were hers in the book.

Anyway, Ursula's book "Ex-Wife," in screen form and known as "The Divorcee," is a very well made picture. We were entertained by it at its premiere in the Penn yesterday. We confess that neither the story nor the heroine arouse much of our sympathy. But both interested us.

Robert Z. Leonard, the director, proves that he is a true craftsman at his art. And the cast is excellent.

THE MAN'S VIEWPOINT

Norma Shearer has the title role, that of the modern lady who attains a man's viewpoint on life and then finds herself divorced and in need of a new set of illusions. Chester Morris plays the husband—or, should it be—ex-husband. Conrad Nagel is there as a constant sweetheart, who is robbed of happiness by a tragic fate.

A spectacular moment comes with the depiction of a motor car smashup. There is a realistic flare in this episode. Over moonlit roads speeds the automobile, its drunken driver and its passengers. Then a crazy swerve and over the embankment it goes. Sound screen registers the impact of the crash on your ears. Then come the hysteric cries of women. Then you view the upset car and its spilled occupants. It is as gripping a moment as we've seen in the movies in months.

THOSE GAY PARTIES

The picture is jammed full of gay parties, gay drink and gay men and women; jammed full of sophistication. In fact, there is so much sophistication, that, after the bright-colored balloons break and the champagne bottles are empty, it is quite a shallow affair.

We suppose we shouldn't view this woman, the ex-wife, with too keen or dissecting eyes. For, if we do, she will lose her charm and interest. She just will appear another not-so-very-good woman. Yes, we are that old-fashioned!

Dave Schooler's "Color Rhythm," the stage revue, is a glittering show. There is much real and novel talent among its entertainers. David Pesetzki waves the baton for the overture and there is an organlogue.

NEW PICTURE TODAY; THURSTON COMES NEXT WEEK

Thurston, the magician, and his daughter, Jane, return to the Alvin stage Monday for a week's engagement.

"After Dark," the George Sharp revival of Dion Boucicault's old melodrama, will begin a second week in the Pitt Monday.

Molly Picon will present the operetta, "The Little Clown," in the Nixon Wednesday night. The performance is for the benefit of the Jewish Home for Babies.

"Hide-Out," heralded as a collegiate picture that is different, opens today in the Harris. James Murray is featured. The stage offers Willie Mauss, champion cyclist.

JOHN BARRYMORE GOES HIGH-BROW TO ACT SACRED SCARAB

By GEORGE SEIBEL

IN BETWEEN Charles Dickens and J. M. Barrie there was an author whose name was F. Anstey, a very clever chap who had the broad humor of Dickens and the whimsical fancy of Barrie. He was never appreciated as he should have been, but now somebody has resurrected one of his most gorgeous things, "The Man from Blankley's," and turned it into a talking picture for John Barrymore.

Anstey, whose real name was T. Anstey Guthrie, had a rich sense of humor, though he wrote continually for "Punch," and he would have chuckled over Barrymore's capital imitation of a sacred scarab and a praying mantis. No entomologist need go to Egypt or Africa to observe these delightful creatures, John Barrymore is much better.

A few years ago he did "Hamlet"—and now he impersonates the coleoptera.

IT'S A RARE COMEDY

Make no mistake, this is the best thing John Barrymore has done since he went to Hollywood. It is a rare comedy, thanks to the genius of Anstey, whose "Vice Versa" and "The Tinted Venus" are hereby also recommended to the tribe of Will Hays. And Barrymore is delightful as the inebriated lord who wanders into the wrong house, where he is taken for the extra guest hired from Blankley's employment bureau.

The entire cast of characters might have been culled from the pages of Dickens. It is not often that so much good character acting is seen and heard in one picture. And Loretta Young made a sweet heroine.

Perhaps it was a bit daring to test our intelligence quotient with a lot of quips about sacred scarabs and praying mantises, but John Barrymore helped to fill the vacuum with his illuminating impersonations. This is the young Jack Barrymore who was a capital comedian.

NOW AS TO HELEN KANE

The stage show, besides a very delightful "Sweetheart" song and dance, and a colorful back drop of an alpine lake, brought Helen Kane in person, with her baby larynx and vocal loops. Her songs are a pleasing mixture of chewing gum and paprika—the audience was particularly taken with her ballad as a western desperado.

Dick Powell was there again with his crooning melodies, and a clown whose name is Dezso Retter, or something like that, does some very entertaining acrobatic stunts. I was just as grateful for this foretaste of the circus as for the Barrymore insect comedy.

WORLD WAR AND LOVE UNDER AFRICAN MOVIE MOON

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Mamba," one of those African melodramas, opened yesterday in the Warner. It is one grand fight, this picture. The British and the Germans fight, the natives fight and a ferocious-looking Jean Hersholt, as a brutal fellow, beats his black servants and his white wife with a great big whip.

The chief ingredients of the plot appear to be Herr Hersholt's brutality and a love triangle, with the aforementioned Hersholt in one of the corners. The other corners are occupied by Eleanor Boardman and Ralph Forbes. And, of course, it is Mr. Forbes who gets the lady finally.

Side issues are the World War, as it affected the British and Germans in East Africa, and a gala native rebellion. The natives, all painted up, go chasing through the jungles and attack the German fort. British troops come tearing along on horseback in the nick of time. They save the hero and heroine from the native spears, but they claim the fort for King George. With the German flag going down and the British flag going up the flagpole comes the fadeout.

The picture is all done up in technicolor.

Lila Lee, Facing Shortage Of Cash, Gets Advice From Film Scribe

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

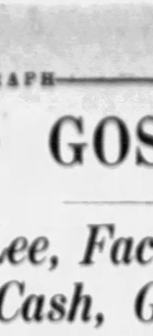
HOLLYWOOD, May. 10.

Lila Lee was that scared. She discovered her weekly allowance of $25 had dribbled to only a few dollars. And the few dollars had to last three more days. I offered Lila the colyum for those days and the privilege of arranging luncheon interviews with other stars. When broke, always interview. (Free advice)

A lone-wolf held up the colony's Brown Derby late 'tother eve. My luck. I had just left. Ruth Nolan, Joseph Schenck's sekretary, knows all about hold-ups. Ruth had a bandit interrupt her ice-cream soda at a soft drink speakeasy a coupla eves ago. Eh, Ruth?

Lila Lee

Evelyn Brent is so dithered. The gardener cleaned out the gold-fish pond and sundry animated curios were exravated. Betty vowed 'twas more fascinating than a magic show. She hung out of a window watching the procedure, which, of course, is against all etiquette. Hanging out of a window, I mean.



Ronald Colman

Frederick Lonsdale, w. k. British playwright has fallen for Hollywood. It serves him right. He cancelled several trips to the colony before finally risking a look. Now that he's here, he is busy. Writing an original dialogue story for Ronald Colman and preparing to supervise a talky version of his play, "Spring Cleaning." Ruth Chatterton will be the star.

HE PLAYS BRIDGE

Arthur Richman, another w.k. playwright, is rated the crack contract bridge player of sinema socials.

I can prove that Sigmund Romberg, composer, thinks in bars. He remarked to Elise Bartlett that he read in the paper she was getting a divorce from Husband Joseph Schildkraut. Elise admitted this. Mr. Romberg promptly sang part of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Kennywood Pavilion Has Dance Tonight

Music for the pavilion dancing in Kennywood Park tonight will be played by Art Giles' Orchestra of eleven musicians. Four concerts will be played Sunday by Thomas E. O'Shea's McKeesport Band. All amusements, including the new auto ride, laff-in-the-dark and chairoplane, will be in operation. Friday, May 16, the daily picnic and free circus act season will begin in the park. John Robinson's elephants will be the outdoor spectacle. Billy Lorette, clown, will appear also.

"THE VAGABOND KING" OPENS ON SCREEN IN THE ENRIGHT

Dennis King is now out in the Enright in his "The Vagabond King" picturization, which won some praise from the critics when it was on its downtown showing. The picture is a technicolor spectacle. It has a dramatic story which is presented with a lot of music and elaborate scenic effects.

The hero is Francois Villon, vagabond Parisian poet, who finds himself king of France for a week. In that time he subdues his country's enemies and falls in love with a princess. And he wins her, too, in the finale, in the best movie fashion.

The supporting cast includes Jeannette MacDonald, Lillian Roth, Warner Oland and O. P. Heggie.

Al Evans, young lad from Dixie, is making his debut as organist. The stage show features the Enright Band and winners in the "Helen Kane Contest," held in Pittsburgh recently.

Gillette Farewell Tonight at Nixon

There will be a little drama on the Nixon stage tonight after the curtain drops on "Sherlock Holmes," this being the last appearance of William Gillette on any stage. Walter Hampden, who is playing "Caponsacchi" at the Alvin, will speed to the other theater as soon as the Alvin curtain is down, to bid farewell to Gillette on behalf of the actors' profession. George Seibel, drama critic of the Sun-Telegraph, will speak some farewell words on behalf of the theatergoing public. And then Gillette will make his last curtain speech, retiring from the theater with his powers and popularity still unimpaired to enjoy the remainder of his life in well-earned rest.

"THE ARIZONA KID," WESTERN FILM, IN ALDINE

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

The Aldine presents in "The Arizona Kid," with Mona Maris and Warner Baxter, what will be a popular show in Pittsburgh. Latin love, accents and thievery with a wild west thriller plot are the reasons.

There's nothing new about it all. The Arizona Kid is living on gold stolen from a deserted mine and pelf from stopped stages. In a Utah village of the late '80s he is popular, suspected only by the sheriff—by cracky.

IS HOSPITABLE

Extending the hospitality of his little home to strangers from the east—a sick man and his beautiful blonde sister—he is, of course, eventually betrayed, only to escape the Vigilantes.

The stranger has turned out to be a card sharper, has shot the mine attendants and stolen gold—he gets his'n. The stranger's sister, it develops, is his wife—she loses a husband and a sweetheart.

Interesting photography, fair comedy, good horsemanship, give spice to these reels of "burning love."

DOGS IN COMEDY

A novelty-comedy with a caste of dogs boasts patient direction, excellent synchronization of human voice to wiggling of canine jaws. Outside of that, it's just what we did as kids playing house with Rover.

We could welcome the strip if it contributed anything to the art of acting, if it offered anything as entertainment, if it were even a good satire on human life. As it is, one can class it more in the freak museum or circus side show category.

JUNGLE LIFE DRAMA IS "INGAGI" FILM IN SHERIDAN

The "Tarzan of the Apes" idea has got into the movies in "Ingagi," (Gorilla), a remarkable sort of picture showing in the Sheridan Square. According to reports, its groundwork was filmed in Africa and upon this was hung a pictorial connective theme which adds to its dramatic quality and gives the impression of a sustained story of life in the jungle, involving both animals and humans. The fact that some scenes are said to have been filmed in Hollywood with an actor playing the part of a gorilla does not detract from the interest. It appears natural anyway.

Among the thrilling scenes is that of a lion-hunt in which the animal springs upon the cameraman, only to be killed at the same instant by a well-placed bullet. The finale is an episode of a native woman being carried into the jungle by a gorilla, a la Tarzan.

Among the native scenes are some excellent depictions of large game and of life in Africa.

Many hands make light work. Employ experienced help for your spring house cleaning. It's a real saving in the end.

FILMLAND.

CHICKIE By ELENORE MEHERIN

Chickie's Suicide Effort Is Unsuccessful

CHAPTER LXXXII.

The water lapped coldly at Chickie's feet. The night was dark. And she was letting herself down.

Her heart hammered like a mad thing; it pumped terror through her veins—made her neck tight. She looked down at the water and saw death. And the fear of it, convulsive and agonized, laid hold on her. She clung piteously to the beam. She sent a dim, broken cry, "Mother—oh, mother—God—," and would have pulled herself up—back—

But all things slipped—a wave swept over her mind. Its darkness became one with the dark of the sky and the water. Her lips smiled. Ah, death—this was death—complete and gentle.

All at once she was aware of a frightful pulling and tearing at her elbows—a dragging at the pit of her arms. And she was awake hanging to the beam, her feet numb and frozen in the water. She didn't know how long it had been—a lifetime or a moment.

But she knew herself and the thing she had come out here to do. With a frantic shock she looked downward. Oh — the waters! But they hadn't come about her. She wondered, whimpering, why this was—why she hadn't died. Hanging here, with the darkness closed about her.

She had an idea that her clinging held her. And it hurt—it was anguish, that straining at her wrists. She wanted to slide down—into that tide—out—away—quiet again—that absence of thought; that sweet lull of death.

Loose her hands—let go! She tried to do this. There was no sensation in the numb fingers. Suddenly she knew that they were wedged between the beam and the plank; they were jammed there. She had wrapped them so. And the weight of her whole, dangling body would not release them.

She tried to muscle herself up; get on a level with these prisoned hands, tear them loose. She would. She must. End this ferocity of pain.

She couldn't raise herself an inch. She had no leverage. And she hung there. Her thought reeled. It was glaring and hot. She murmured: "God—let me—oh, God!"

Chickie Rescued

The hair blew across her forehead. This seemed a madness of cruelty.

Suddenly she felt on her mouth the kiss he had given. A wish to hurt the spot possessed her.

Her body swayed. As it did, she had an incisive image of the beautifully set head lowered; his baffled eyes returning to her. He was sitting in the restaurant now—waiting. He would wait long—

But then she saw Jennie with the glad tears running into her eyes; saw Jennie with her old head tilting proudly because her friend had looked with envious admiration at that Chickie of theirs—

Thinking this, the veins at her heart swelled; they were bursting. Now—Jennie would know, Jonathan would beat his head. They would come here in the morning and find her frozen to death. They would know she had done this fearful thing; they would know why. Mary would know—and Jimmy—the whole world—

She made a frantic, wild, tugging effort. She tried to jerk her arms from their sockets.

She heard a cry, shrill, protesting, opening the night like a red wound. She—crying out like that! God—that was she!

Men running along the pier. Two men. They stooped. They seized her elbows, raised her. One took her frozen hands and with a terrible strength tore them from between the crossbeams. The flesh bled. She felt nothing. She dropped in someone's arms.

They laid her on the wooden planks. One said: "Better get an ambulance. Suicide, I suppose."

Starts Back Home

A wild thing leaped within her. Through the fogs heaving at her mind, these two peering faces became startling in their menace. She sat up, reaching out the poor, bleeding hands, smiling vaguely.

One man said to his companion: "Well—"

"Wait a bit—" And kindly to Chickie. "Think you're all right? Think you can walk?"

She got up then. She said in a voice that choked and strained: "Yes—"

But she staggered. The man helped her. He said, "Likely to try that again, Miss?"

"I lost my balance. I was sitting—"

"Bad place to sit, Miss—this time of night—"

She couldn't move her fingers. But she made her lips smile. This was the only thought in her mind—escape—get away. She said: "Please—I'm all right—please—"

"Walk then—let me see—"

She tried. She steadied herself along the lumber piles. She came back to him and laughed: "The car's not far—thank you—You're kind."

But he wouldn't let her go. "See here, Miss—you can't make it. Your feet are soaked. You can't walk. Better let me get the ambulance."

"No! I'm all right—please."

"But see here, Miss! mind you, don't sit here and lose your balance again." He took her arm, half carrying her to the street car.

She dropped to a place in the corner, hiding her wet shoes, her dripping skirt. She put her bruised hands in the wide sleeves of her coat.

Her wrists were iron things. They were enormous. They were in flames. She could scarcely bear their weight and their fire. But her mind was cold. It was a lump of ice. The cruel chill of it bit through her nerves.

She sat low in the seat, staring from the window. She could feel the lapping of the water; the massy dark and the wind, sinking like death about her.

Her eyes burned. Now the car taking her back was a fated thing, its wheels and their grind crushing her. She listened. Going back—each block nearer.

It became hard for her to breathe; hard to quiet the thing that thumped and was so frightened at her throat.

Sickening Thoughts

She knew that she must face it now. She would not wind her hands about the beam again. Face it—yes—

How? God—how? She cowered. She thought of Jennie and her father and the sickness of her mind put down the pain of her body.

An Italian woman with a dark-eyed child of two or three got on the car. She took the place next to Chickie. The baby stuck out its foot, striking Chickie's arm. Pain shot to her mind in a flash of misery. She dared not raise her hands to wipe the tears running to the corners of her lips.

She bore it in a dumb resignation. Yet she wondered with a kind of childish panic if it were really she going through this bitter waste; was it really she that had run to the edge of the wooden pier and shuddered in horror at the thing that she must do; really Chickie, that Jonathan loved, who must now hide herself away; even must die? She that had been so glad and all of life a song—she that had loved the moon-riding in clouds of flame. Had wanted some laughing, glorious other at her side!

Now—she scarcely dared to raise her eyes. And her hands were hidden there in the sleeves of the coat. Oh—her hands were shameful things. They would let the whole world know—

They made her know. It was she—And she must go through it—must stand up strong, somehow, and meet it—Oh, God!—But as though God cared! for her—now—

Meets Barry

Oh—she mustn't think like this—tears rushing to her eyes—no hand to wipe them free—drink them back—that was the way . . . don't hide your hands—pretend she fell—say that to Jennie—laugh and tell what a tumble-tille she's got to be—Jennie wouldn't guess.

She swayed. She was tired and wanted to sleep. And if she could have set her hand on anything then that would give surcease of thought; of all this driving anguish she would have given up her life. And gladly. There was no longer beauty in the sky nor music in the mountains marching to the sea.

So she had tried to dash away. And now she was coming back. And all the pain, with its wanton patience, waited.

She got off the car. Suddenly she remembered that she had no key. Ho—she laughed. Why—she hadn't ever intended to need a key again.

She would go through the alley—climb through the kitchen window. Wildie would hear. Would he bark? Would they be awake? It was only half past ten.

She leaned against a fence, her feet dragging. The Dillons lived in this house. Sarah Dillon went to school with Chickie. She was a plain, comical girl, full of heart. A light upstairs. Suppose it was in Sarah's room? Suppose Sarah should look out and see her faltering there against the gate? Suppose Sarah should glance into her mind and see its terror and its shame—

She hurried. It seemed to her that she was running into a bleakness, and there were no lights, not even one single star.

She turned sharply at the corner. Some one caught her arm. She cried out softly, but in terrible alarm.

It was he, Barry, and he said: "For the love of God, Chickie—for the love of God—"

She tried to break away from him.

"Where were you? God, isn't it hideous enough—"

"Ho—let me go! Ho—what is it to you—"

But he held her.

SUMMER SCHOOL -:- -:- -:- DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

ASTONISHING when young girls will run away to go to school! But they're in love with teacher.

Poor he is—goes bare for the want of clothes—or is it scorn of them? He has nothing but a song in his heart and a staggering store of knowledge. He crosses the world and back again well fed by the sweet charity of the pretty creatures who are dazzled by his gilded head. He is kin to Pan, a son of Venus, and brother to every warm heart; and when he chooses to hold summer school on the subject of how to rope, tie and brand a man, with just a single golden or midnight hair, the girls play hookey from every other thing in the world to attend, and find out how.

Of his school, the green grass is the carpet. The azure sky the ceiling. The walls—the innumerable distances, green, and flowery, of the whole country world.

Glorietta deserts aunties, matinees, movies, teas, walks, naps and prayers to sit among the daisies and listen to Love. Where, while she listens, is Death, who lurks—in warning paintings—in the apple tree. To Glorietta he is a myth, while there sits—pink and white and gold and living—Love! Love who has never died. Glorietta ponders that in this same summer school, on the hills of Greece, girls in white and sandals sat in the grass and listened to this same little voice. She thinks that in the flower-embroidered meadows of mediaeval England countess and shepherdess alike ran away from castle and cottage to hark to the wise little pedagogue—himself so far from home. She remembers Agnes Sorel, Ariadne, Juliet, Cleopatra, Stella, Eloise; the gentle German Meta, English Evelyn Byrd, Puritan Priscilla. They all ran away to school; some died of love of Love. For "teacher."

This ancient and ever-young Eros never interested Man, it's said, as much as he has always done Woman. It's said, in print—very loud—that just now Man sets less store by him than ever—that is in any devoted way.

If it's so—and do you think it is?—he still is the big idea to girls the world around. They read the story about him, if they throw the rest of the paper away. They pick his name out of the crowd. If a lady can prick up her ears, then she does when his name is dropped, like a diamond from the good stepchild's mouth.

Glorietta plays hookey from anything to sit in Cupid's summer school!

Love's Reawakening -:- Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge's Father Considers Her Theory

My father punctiliously set a chair for me before he answered my announcement that I had received an answer to my telegram, with permission to tell him my theory of the object sought by the burglars.

"Do not hurry, dearest," he said, "and do not bother to arrange your facts in any set order. Just tell me all about it, simply, in your own way, and I'll mull it over afterward."

I began my story at once, for, anticipating Marion's telegram, I had taken my memory along the course of her strange confidence to me and was ready with every detail of that month-old colloquy between Lillian's winsome young daughter and myself.

He made no comment at all until I had finished. Then he looked thoughtfully at me for several seconds.

"A sandalwood box with a secret compartment containing three envelopes," he repeated at last, "two of them heavier than the third, and apparently holding flat packages protected by the corrugated paper which photographers use. A box intrusted to a little child by a dying grandmother with the injunction not to open it until she was 18, and to say nothing about it to her mother, the dying woman's daughter-in-law. It sounds like a third-rate movie plot, and if I did not know Marion so well I should dismiss the whole thing with your husband's favorite phrase of an 'imagination working overtime.' But, of course, anything of that sort is out of the question with Marion, so we must proceed on the theory that the injunction was laid upon Marion, and that, whether the contents of the envelope be worthless or valuable, her old grandmother believed them to hold a 'fortune' for the child when she should attain the age of 18 years."

He was leaning forward in his chair, his elbows resting on his knees, his hands close together.

"Now for the second step," he went on. "Could someone have overheard your colloquy with Marion — Katie perhaps—and repeated it — innocently enough—in a quarter where such half knowledge would be dangerous?"

"I am positive that no one could have heard anything we said," I answered. "Marion herself took the most elaborate precautions against anyone overhearing us."

He picked up the pencil, which he had laid with the pad resting upon the arm of his chair, and jotted down a cryptic letter.

"Do you think that Marion ever confided this secret to anyone besides yourself?" he asked next.

"I am sure that she did not," I answered promptly. Then, with a sudden recollection of feminine adolescent psychology, observed in my teaching days, I amended my statement.

"At least, I am certain that she had told no one of it before she left the farm this fall," I said. "Marion is so frank and honest that her mind is rather an open book to those of us who know her intimately. But—this year she had intimate friends among her school companions—something entirely new for her—last year she was singularly alone and unhappy—and—and"

Again he jotted a cryptic letter upon the pad of paper, while my imagination traveled crazily over a fantastic road, with sinister shadows lurking at the sides of it.

"There is but one angle left of this particular theory," he went on, "and that bolsters the improbable theory that the sandalwood box really contains something valuable. Do you think it possible that someone intimate with Marion's father or grandmother knew of the existence of the box and its contents and is now making an attempt to get possession of it?"

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Bridal Path

True wifely consideration consists in tactfully reminding your husband of his approaching wedding anniversary, and never forcing him to strain his memory to recall something for which he was not responsible.

A man may remember tenderly the first time he saw you, the first time he kissed you and the night he proposed to you; but the day you got him to the altar may be only one of the bad dreams that he wants to forget.

* * *

No matter how desperately a man may want to marry a woman, the thought of the wedding ceremony holds nothing but terror and embarrassment for him. No matter how little a woman may care to marry a man, the vision of the wedding ceremony gives her a little thrill of triumph.

When a prospective bridegroom gets drunk at his bachelor dinner, it is not in order to celebrate his joy, but in order to drown his fears and tremors.

For a woman, getting married is an exhilarating thing, like climbing the Golden Stair! but for a man, it is a desperate act, much more like walking the plank.

No wonder a man breaks his wedding vows so lightly. He never thinks about them beforehand, is totally unconscious while he's making them, and forgets all about them the moment after they are spoken.

* * *

One wedding anniversary seems to be too much for a man to keep in his mind; but no matter how many wedding anniversaries a modern divorcee may have, she never forgets to drop a little flower of memory on each of them.

A modern woman can endure almost anything except being "reverenced" for her years.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Two Weddings

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My best friend is to be married in June and, while I am not going to be an attendant, I shall be visiting at her home. It is to be a 5 o'clock wedding. What would be an appropriate dress for me to wear?

Then another less intimate friend is to be married soon and I am invited to the reception afterwards, which will be at a country club. What type of dress is good for this occasion (at 1 o'clock in the afternoon)? Should one be punctual and arrive just at 1 o'clock, stay a few minutes, and leave—or what? U. S.

FOR THE FIRST WEDDING, which I take it is to take place in town, wear formal day clothes. A 5 o'clock wedding is a day wedding, and to weddings we should wear our most formal clothes.

For the other wedding, with the reception taking place at the country club, you would wear summery clothes of a more informal type. And how easy that is this year, with flowery chiffons and crepes and lovely pastel shades of soft taffetas!

Wedding Breakfast

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell me which is correct? A says that a wedding breakfast can be had only after a morning wedding. B says it can be called wedding breakfast even after an evening wedding. MARGARET.

A IS correct.

Holding Open House

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What is meant by "holding open house?" D. A.

This term is sometimes used when people mean that they will be at home during a certain afternoon or a certain evening, and would like to have their friends come and stay as long as they wish. It is sometimes specifically used to indicate a housewarming, when friends come to see the new home and wander about admiring — we hope—the various rooms and the various interesting gadgets." Or the term may mean the most simple tea parties.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Long hair grows six inches a year and fluffs away at the ends six inches a year, always remaining the same length. The reason why the ends of the hair are lighter in color and the reason why the ends split are because the points are dead tissues, done for and on their way.

When the gums bleed, hie to the dentist. He will take his little pickaxes and spades and remove tartar that has formed under the gums, causing them to soften and to lose tone. When brushing the teeth begin on the gums. As the brush descends send the bristles inward, between the teeth. Brushing crosswise of the teeth affords only a partial cleansing.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

The Fear of Cancer

It is very natural that people should dread and fear cancer. The death rate from cancer is appalling, but hygienic measures and publicity are helping to make it less.

DR COPELAND

Cancer is found everywhere. It attacks persons of all ages and in all stations of life.

Sir Berkeley Moynihan, the famous English surgeon, has said about cancer:

"Cancer is not sometimes, but always, curable when taken early enough. The public needs education. The fear of cancer is the real 'king of terrors.' When people face the truth and treat unusual growth quickly, truth will set them free."

There has been a widespread movement recently proposing public education in preventive measures that make for health. If the public will only act upon the knowledge passed on to them by doctors, by the press, the radio and other means of education, great benefit will result.

It is difficult to say what causes cancer. There is some peculiar sensitiveness or lack of resistance of the tissues that fosters the cancerous growth. This quality, whatever it is, is present in the middle or advanced age more than it is in youth or early life.

Whenever a lump is found anywhere on the body, whether it is sore or not, you should consult a doctor for examination. A lump or tumor, whether large or small, on the outside or inside of the body, may develop into cancer, but in the early stages be quite innocent.

If a sore does not heal quickly the doctor should be consulted. Most ordinary sores heal quickly, but if the cure is not speedy find out why.

Great progress has been made by the aid of the X-ray and other modern methods of diagnosis. Doctors are now better prepared to discover this malady than they were formerly.

Fear of an operation keeps many a person from consulting a doctor in time. Many a secret sufferer who has been dumb with misery has been told by his doctor, after consultation, that his trouble was of no consequence at all. Do not be the victim of a foolish fear.

Supposing your fears are realized, isn't it better to have your doctor find out in time and have the trouble removed? Remember the words of Sir Berkeley: "Cancer is not sometimes, but always, curable when it is taken early enough." Those are words of cheer and hope.

Everyone should have regularly, once of twice a year, a physical examination. This is important to find out if all is well with this wonderful human machine of ours. Thus by prevention and early attention, disease will be blotted out and in no other way can it be done.

When it is known or found that cancer exists by all means go where the most scientific methods of treatment are provided. Through radium, the X-ray, and, in some cases, surgery, there is every prospect of cure, provided early treatment is given.

Horoscopes

Sunday, May 11

Sunday's horoscope shows a fairly fortunate turn of events for ecclesiastical or mystical avocations or pursuits, but the financial interests are not favorably considered. Shun loans or financial hazards. Personal activities should assume unexpected angles, probably involving change or travel.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a fair year in established lines of industry as well as in new undertakings. But the funds should be safeguarded and not imperiled by loans or chances.

A child born on this day may be industrious and practical as well as romantically inclined and given to original investigations and unconventional social ideas. It will probably have an interesting career although not of large financial success.

Monday, May 12

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather critical trend of events. The employment is under hostile rule and there may be difficulties with those in places of authority and power. Also there may be some element of violence or personal danger to contend with. Probably in connection with travel or change.

Those whose birthday it is may have some change or travel during the year, and this may be subject to some accident or physical danger or violent encounter. The employment is in jeopardy, and not much in the way of favors or recognition is to be expected from superiors or those in authority.

A child born on this day may have a querulous and high strung nature, making it difficult to get on with, unless it is well disciplined and guided in infancy. It may be subject to accident or perilous predicaments and may also find it difficult to succeed in the employment of others.

Second Quarter Upswing In Business to Hold Production Decline Low

By B. E. V. LUTY.

It can now be stated with authority that production of steel ingots in the last three months has averaged 82 per cent of capacity, as the official report of Bessemer and open-hearth ingot production in April has been issued, also the annual ascertainment of capacity for January 1, 1930.

February was at about 85 per cent, March at about 82 per cent and April at about 80 per cent, while it is clear that the rate in the past week has been around 78 per cent.

JANUARY CAPACITY

Total steel ingot capacity January 1, 1930, is given by the official report now issued at 63,067,546 gross tons per annum, representing 2.2 per cent increase during the year. In four years there was a total increase of 13 per cent. Last year's increase was relatively small, perhaps because during the greater part of the year mills were busy filling orders, and new construction frequently involves throwing some old capacity out of commission temporarily or permanently. Work in progress at the beginning of this year, or definitely planned, involved increases at a rate fully equal to the average pace of the last four years. In relation to capacity at the beginning of the respective years steel ingot production has been as follows: 1926, 84 per cent; 1927, 75½ per cent; 1928, 85 per cent; 1929, 88½ per cent.

MILL BACKLOGS

To the talk now heard in the steel trade and outside a sort of higher criticism may be applied, by surveying the course of affairs in the last three months and recalling what was being said during the period. The records show that conditions were better than appeared from the talk, except perhaps in the fore part of February. The decrease in production after the middle of February, although slight, cast a wet blanket for the trade was accustomed to seasonal improvement. The virtual absence of mill backlogs, when backlogs were common at that time of year, made producers uneasy, but the outcome was that they received orders at rather a good rate, the orders simply coming in at the last moment, for prompt or rush shipment.

SLIGHT DROP

This observation may be applied to the present, leading to a conclusion that while steel demand is not engaged in increasing it is not really falling off to any material extent, and that if the common seasonal precedent is followed, of steel production declining to a low July, the decline will be slight. One must not carry the philosophy too far, however. While it is a common prediction that the second half of this year will be better than the first half, on account of general business improvement, there are several lines of steel consumption that are marked for seasonal decrease and other lines whose activity may fall off, and it is unsafe at present to make a definite prediction that steel production will begin increasing after July as it has done in recent years with the exception of 1923, 1927 and 1929.

VISITS GAIN TO MAUSOLEUM

Mt. Royal Memorial Mausoleum, located on Pittsburgh-Butler pike above Glenshaw, dedicated a year ago this month, is still holding the interest of the community. The memorial, generally known as the "Westminster Abbey of Pittsburgh," has become a shrine for the hundreds of its crypt owners who have made this provision for the inevitable.

This compartment mausoleum has become a permanent institution in metropolitan Pittsburgh. The indorsements which it has already received fully justify the original belief that the city was ready for such an abbey.

The development of the modern mausoleum is a natural and logical outgrowth of man's persistent efforts throughout the ages to improve burial conditions. He has striven since the beginning of time to improve his general circumstances, to improve his living conditions, his means of transportation and communication and to build better homes, better hospitals, better schools, better playgrounds, better office buildings and industrial plants. Along with this general development and improvement, there have been throughout the ages very definite indications of man's desire to improve his last resting place.

NEW FEATURES ADDED AT PARK

Enlargements Made to Favorite Amusements At Kennywood Park

Kennywood Park continues to hold its enviable position as Western Pennsylvania's greatest summer playground. Now in its thirty-second season of success, Kennywood offers a variety of amusements and recreational features unsurpassed in America. It is the one big picnic spot of the Greater Pittsburgh district, and its daily outing season is accompanied by the finest outdoor circus spectacles possible to obtain from American and European booking organizations.

Dancing is held afternoon and evening, except Sunday, in a magnificent pavilion redecorated this season and the park maintains the finest inland swimming pool in the world, safe and sanitary, with a wide, white sand beach which makes it practically a summer resort. This year the beach has been enlarged with the addition of a play area containing swings, ocean waves and other recreational apparatus.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Only the best of orchestras supply dance music at Kennywood, and this also applies to the band concerts featured each Sunday, two in the afternoon and two in the evening. These are played on an enormous band stand with thousands of comfortable seats for those who make it a regular habit to listen to these high class programs each Sunday.

"The Voice of Kennywood," last word in internal radio equipment supplies its own musical and other entertainment, is also being put to practical use. This year a new music tower has been added, increasing its efficiency. In addition, the system has been still further improved, making it possible to hear this fine feature all over Kennywood Park.

ADDITIONS MADE

One of the most interesting of Kennywood's new features is the free Monkeyland on the island in Willow Pond. Situated near the park's frontage, this miniature nation of chimpanzees holds romping paraphernalia for the amusing little mimics to "do their stuff." A "hotel" houses the monks, surrounding the cage are rabbits and geese, and a beautiful swan makes its home in the pond.

A new Auto Race, a juvenile "drive yourself" speedway, and a funny ride over darkened tracks known as "Laff-in-the-Dark" have been added to the park's lengthy mechanical amusement list. Another feature new this year is the Chair-o-Plane, a thrilling circular ride. A Miniature Menagerie containing small circus wagon cages holding every known cat animal is another free feature new to Kennywood this season. The tent covering this attraction is an exact replica of the big top traveling shows. The Miniature Railroad has also been enlarged, improved and re-located adjoining the Auto Race.

M'KEE-OLIVER CO. IN NEW OFFICES

New Type of Machine Permits High Degree Of Cutting Accuracy

McKee-Oliver, Inc., is now located in its new offices and warehouse at 1326 Carson street. The firm was formed in 1923 to sell iron and steel from mill and warehouse. The new location, just below the Point Bridge, is proving an ideal spot, as all freight stations can be reached within 10 minutes. It is desirably convenient for customers, who, in an emergency, desire to call for their material.

NEW MACHINE

An addition is being added to the warehouse in the form of extension of crane-ways and structure to carry roof for the storage yard. McKee-Oliver, Inc., has installed the new type of cold saw, the only machine of its kind in Pittsburgh, which permits very quick, efficient cutting of soft steel bars, cold rolled bars, angles, beams and other structural steels without discoloring the metal. Another feature of the machine is that it cuts with a greater degree of accuracy as to length and leaves no annoying fins or steel ends.

MAIN PRODUCTS

The supplying of sheets, plates, bars, structurals, cold finished steel and concrete bars, either from mill or warehouse, in stock sizes and lengths, or cut to specifications, constitute McKee Oliver's main products, though special steels of all kinds are dealt in as well.

McKee Oliver, Incorporated, maintains a fleet of trucks for deliveries in and about Pittsburgh to take care of warehouse shipments, and for mill shipments there are Pittsburgh representatives.

Peace Bridge Is Drawing Canada and U. S. Closer

—By B. C. FORBES—

BUFFALO, May 9.—Communication is civilization, it has been well said. The opening of the peace bridge between Buffalo and Canada, commemorating more than a century of peace between the two countries, is drawing the two peoples closer together industrially.

American concerns located in Buffalo are opening branch plants across the river and operating them under one management. The distance is only 15 minutes to half an hour.

A start has been made, also, in opening in Buffalo branches of Canadian concerns.

The main objective of these two movements is, of course, to overcome tariff barriers.

HOW MANY PERSONS, think you, used the bridge during the year ended April 1? No fewer than 7,360,813. Vehicles totalled 2,269,844. There were issued 137,934 permits to Americans to remain in Canada more than 24 hours, but only 35,719 Canadians applied for a like privilege. ('Nuff Said!).

Commuters using the bridge numbered 7,535.

THE ONE MAN more responsible than any other for the carrying through of this worthy project was Frank B. Baird, veteran industrialist and public-spirited citizen who, as chairman of the commission sponsoring the movement, went ahead in face of many obstacles.

While conducting me over the bridge and over the excellent boulevard stretching between the terminus and Niagara Falls, Mr. Baird related with wholly justifiable pride that the structure had proved successful beyond all expectations. The bonds issued to pay the cost are being rapidly liquidated and within half a dozen years the structure will have paid for itself and be ready to be turned over to the governments.

BUFFALO REJOICES in possessing an unusual number of outstanding citizens, men who combine with brains and achievement a sense of public responsibility.

Walter P. Cooke, the noted lawyer and financier who played so useful a part in European reparations work, is a Buffalonian, genial, cultured, hospitable, equally at home playing golf with the Prince of Wales and rubbing shoulders with rank and file employes in the various organizations with which he is associated.

George F. Rand, the dynamic young banker who engineered the organization of the Marine Midland Corporation, already controlling some 18 banks, including one in New York, is a Buffalonian, and the upbuilder of the Marine Trust Company, a local institution with resources of over $300,000,000. This, too, is the home of the Schoellkopf family, including Jacob F., Jacob F., Jr., Alfred E. and Paul A. The last is president of the Niagara Hudson Power Company, which is becoming the giant of New York state utilities.

A few years ago a youngish banker, Lewis G. Harriman, moved from New York, and has made a notable record in building up the M. & T. Trust Company, of which he is president.

Among others who receive credit for having contributed invaluably to developing the progress of the city are John D. Larkin, Jr., William H. Donner, William J. Conners, Edward H. Butler, Norman E. Mack, the Wickwire family, Frank F. Henry, Harry T. Ramsdell, William J. (Bill) Donovan, Oliver Cabana, Jr., Timothy Burns, Melvin L. Baker, Edward B. Germain, Seymour H. Knox, Maj. R. H. Fleet, George Waite and Robert W. Pomeroy.

BETHLEHEM STEEL has been aggressively developing its Lackawanna Steel Plant here; President Eugene G. Grace calls Buffalo one of the most advantageous cities in the United States in which to produce steel for the Great Lakes region. Other notable enterprises which are going ahead here include the Wickwire Spencer Steel Company, the Seneca Iron and Steel Company, Donner Steel, Curtiss-Wright, Consolidated Aircraft, Irving Air Chute, Spencer Kellogg and Sons, Jacob Dold Packing Company, Dunlop Tire & Rubber, Stewart Trucks, Ford and Chevrolet assembly plants, many automotive parts industries and Pierce-Arrow. This last plant is running day and night and has the distinction of showing a greater percentage gain this year than any other motor company. Buffalo is fortunate in having a wide diversity of industries.

The Niagara territory is also coming very strongly to the front in the manufacture of chemicals.

THE RIGHT GEOGRAPHICAL LOCATION, cheap electric power and high-powered men make a great combination for building up a city.

Orders for Plate Glass Show Increase

Little change is reported in the markets for the various kinds of flat glass, according to National Glass Budget. Orders for plate glass showed a slight increase, but demand for other kinds of sheet glass is not increasing in number of orders or in quantity as they should.

It is estimated that stocks of window glass in the warehouses of the distributors are in the neighborhood of 700,000 boxes less than they were at this time a year ago. Production of window glass remains low. Stocks in the manufacturers' warehouses are thought to be in the neighborhood of a third of a million boxes below what they were at this time a year ago.

So far as can be learned, there was no change of importance in the rolled and wired glass situations. There is plenty of room for improvement in both the amount of business being transacted and in market conditions.

NEW RAILROAD AND OCEAN TERMINAL

GAIN SHOWN IN BUILDING

Contract awarded in April for building and engineering projects in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains, totaling $483,251,700, were larger than in any month since August of last year. The past month's record was 6 per cent greater than the total of $456,119,000 reported for March, but showed a loss of 25 per cent from the unusually large record for April, 1929. For the first four months of the year awards totaled $1,580,398,900 as compared with $1,897,899,800 for the corresponding period of 1929, a decline of 17 per cent.

Public works and utilities for the fourth consecutive month were the most important of all classes. This type of construction totaled $149,669,900 or 31 per cent of the total awards in April. Residential building totaled $123,141,900 or 25 per cent of the total; awards for commercial structures amounted to $73,241,100 or 15 per cent; and new contracts for industrial buildings aggregated $38,120,600 or 8 per cent.

Contemplated new work of all kinds reported in April amounted to $954,617,400 compared with $732,735,900 in March and $940,249,100 for April 1929.

April construction contracts in the Pittsburgh District (Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky) amounted to $54,994,900, compared with $73,519,600 in March and with the April 1929 record of $61,013,200. Total awards since the first of the year in this territory have reached a sum of $210,327,500, a decline of 5 per cent from the same period in 1929.

Public works and utilities featured the April building record, with $16,244,400, or 30 per cent of all awards. Residential buildings ranked second, amounting to $14,926,800, or 27 per cent; commercial buildings aggregated $5,543,700, or 10 per cent; and social and recreational buildings totaled $5,274,100, or 9 per cent.

Construction work reported as in the contemplated stage in April amounted to $143,225,500. This was 81 per cent greater than the amount reported in March and almost twice the amount in the same month a year ago.

Aluminum Company to Make Insulation

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

HEAT INSULATING MATERIAL is the latest addition to the long list of products made by the Aluminum Company of America. Working with the Philip Carey Manufacturing Company of Lockland, O., the Mellon Institute of Pittsburgh and the research engineers of the Aluminum Company have completed experimental work on a new material called "Carey Aluminite."

With the completion of development work lasting two years, preparations are being made to start production on a large scale. The Carey company is planning to build a $500,000 plant at East St. Louis, Ill., adjoining the aluminum company's ere plant. The processed material will be delivered to the new Carey plant to be made into the completed product. A small unit is already producing in commercial quantities.

To Be Used In Furnaces

THE NEW INSULATION is designed for use in electric furnaces, fire-brick boiler settings, heat treating furnaces, glass furnaces, regenerator chambers in iron and steel plants and similar structures where internal temperatures range from 1,800 to 2,600 degees, Fahrenheit.

The Carey plant will make the material into insulating blocks, bricks and powder. The commercial value of the new aluminite insulation lies in its ability to resist the disintegrating effect of high temperatures. In addition it has such excellent heat insulating value that only a half to a third as much is required to give the results now obtained from existing high temperature heat insulating materials.

Equipment at Alcoa

THE ALUMINUM COMPANY will be one of the large users of the new material. Electric furnaces operating at high temperatures are used in the refining operations in aluminum production. The new furnaces being installed at Alcoa, Tenn., will be completely equipped with Carey Aluminite insulation.

The insulation is made from bauxite, the ore from which aluminum is produced. Bauxite is an oxide of aluminum, chemically combined with water. It also contains iron oxide, silicon and other impurities. By a chemical process a material is produced which has a smaller amount of water in the combination.

Material Is Light

THE SUBSTANCE PRODUCED by the process is light of weight and is of a porous texture. These qualities give its heat insulating qualities.

Experiments have also produced another heat insulating material which is a by-product of the manufacture of aluminum from bauxite. This can be made at a lower cost than the aluminite but it is not as effective in resisting heat. It is planned to place this on the market in the future.

The Philip Carey Company is one of the largest manufacturers of asbestos, magnesia and asphalt products.

Makes Other Materials

IN MAKING ALUMINUM a large number of other by-products have been developed. The majority of these are sold as semi-finished materials by the aluminum company to other organizations which, like the Carey company, complete the manufacturing processes.

Imports of Plate Glass Show Decline

During the week ended May 3, imports of plate glass into this country receded in comparison with the preceding week's total of incoming shipments, it is disclosed in the latest unofficial compilations. Shipments of window glass, on the other hand, were in some larger volume. Plate glass imports for the week totaled 87 cases and 78,370 pounds, as against 658 cases and 66,140 pounds received the week of April 26.

Promotion Made by Chesapeake & Ohio

RICHMOND, Va., May 10.—George D. Brooke, general manager of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, will become vice president and general manager in charge of operations of the Chesapeake and Ohio lines, John J. Bernet, president of the road, announced.

4TH DISTRICT IMPROVING

CLEVELAND, May 10.—During the first quarter in the Fourth Federal Reserve District, which includes Western Pennsylvania, most production figures have shown an expansion from month to month, but the March records (the latest complete ones available), in all cases except building, indicate that the growth during the first quarter from the low point of December was no greater and in some cases even less than seasonal. Steel production declined in March and coal output was down more than is usual for that time of year. Retail and wholesale distribution was in smaller volume and employment showed little change from February. On the other hand, automobile output showed practically the same increase from February as was reported in 1929 and March building contracts awarded exhibited more than the usual seasonal expansion. They are, however, still well below the level of other recent years. Bank debits also increased more than seasonally.

The second quarter seems to have opened in a slightly more favorable manner. Industrialists in many parts of the district state that the trend of general business is now definitely upward, though the rate of improvement is still quite slow.

If you need help with your spring housecleaning, see the "Situations Wanted" ads in the Classified Section.

LOCAL TRADE CONTINUES QUIET

Wearing Apparel Sales Spurred by Weather; Auto Demand Improves

General conditions continue to average quiet, although warm weather has slightly stimulated demand for seasonable wearing apparel and department stores have been conducting sales with comparatively good results, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Jobbers of dry goods, men's and women's clothing, millinery and kindred lines report sales more numerous, but purchases averaging rather small, and total volume still considerably below normal. The warm weather has created a stronger demand for men's straw hats, but the volume is not normal.

There is a moderate demand for shoes and leather goods, with prices rather low. Sale of new automobiles has improved to some extent but the large stock of used cars is a problem to dealers. Seasonable lines of hardware, with the exception of builder's hardware, are moving fairly well. Demand for lumber and builders' supplies, while slightly better, is still quiet. Dealers in groceries and confectionery report that business continues to drag.

OIL OUTPUT UP

Demand for electrical fixtures continues rather quiet, although manufacturers of electrical equipment for public utility plants, etc., are transacting a rather large volume of business.

Demand for sanitary and radiator equipment continued at a rather unsatisfactory rate. The production of crude oil is slightly higher, with demand for refined products showing a moderate increase.

Production of bituminous coal is at a slightly higher rate than last week, but about 10 per cent lower than a year ago, and demand continues slow. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.55 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1 to $1.10.

Local collections are showing a slight improvement, but generally they are averaging slow.

STOCKS OPEN IRREGULARLY HIGHER

Westinghouse Electric, Chrysler, Steel and G. E. Advance—Trading Quiet

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP.)—Stock prices moved irregularly higher in a quiet opening of the market today. General Electric mounted 1¼, with a block of 6,000 shares. Westinghouse Electric and Chrysler mounted a point, Missouri, Kansas, Texas and Sears Roebuck ¾ and U. S. Steel ½. United Aircraft and American Tobacco B shipped back a point and National Cash Register ¾.

The market gained in strength as trading progressed. A strong buying movement in the utilities turned prices generally upward and gains of 1 to 6 points were numerous at the end of the first half hour, the maximum upturn being recorded by Electric Power and Light, which appeared on the tape in long strings.

The dullness of the market yesterday was interpreted in bullish quarters as indicating a drying up of the recent liquidation, and operations for the advance were resumed on a moderate scale. The week end mercantiles reviews were mildly optimistic, pointing to better retail buying with the arrival of unseasonably warm weather.

Gains of 3 to more than 4 points were made by Westinghouse Electric, J. I. Case, Canadian Pacific, Vanadium, A. M. Byers and Eastman Kodak. Shares selling up 2 points or more included U. S. Steel; Radio, American Can, American Water Works and Worthington Pump.

United Aircraft was under moderate pressure, sagging more than a point in response to the first quarter earnings report showing net of 39 cents per share, as against $1.05 a share on a somewhat smaller capitalization during the same period last year. Southern Railway shipped back a point and Allied Chemical 3.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables at $4.85 13-16.

Receiver Appointed For Jewerly Firm

Robert C. Sproul was appointed receiver by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson in the involuntary bankruptcy suit filed yesterday against Israel DeRoy, Samuel DeRoy, Emanuel I. DeRoy and the estate of Abe I. DeRoy, deceased, partners trading as S. H. DeRoy and Company, retail jewelers, at 40 Smithfield street. The court placed the receiver's bond at $100,000.

The concern involved is not connected with any other jewelry store. The three signers for the bankruptcy petition recorded claims against the company aggregating $47,083.61.

This brings the total since Thursday morning, and including today's initial trades, up to almost 50,000,000 pounds engaged for shipment abroad at 12.80c a pound, C. I. F. European ports.

PURE OIL NET WILL COVER DIVIDEND

Results of Fiscal Year Indicate Earnings Will Be About $1.50 a Share

CHICAGO, May 10.—Report of Pure Oil Company for fiscal year ended March 31, 1930, will probably show net income after all deductions sufficient to cover dividends paid during the year by a small margin. Dividend payments last year totaled about $6,613,000, including preferred dividends and 6% dividends paid on 3,038,370 shares of $25 par common stock.

This indicates a decrease of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 from net income of $11,224,081, after all charges and reserves, reported for the preceding fiscal year. Indicated earnings a common share are slightly over $1.50, against $3.05 in year ended March 31, 1929.

Curtailed development of East Texas fields and the company's co-operation with the general curtailment program of oil production, together with unfavorable oil prices, had an adverse effect on earnings. During the year, however, the company made several improvements and additions, the benefits from which will not be derived until later this year. Two pipe lines are under construction which, when placed in operation, should prove profitable.

In the last three months of the fiscal year the company discovered an outlying field in Van Zandt County, Southwest Texas, which has been demonstrated to be a major field. Pure Oil Company is operating a unit agreement with Humble Oil, Sun Oil, Texas Corporation and Shell, with Pure Oil Company owning over 50 per cent of the defined area. Production from this field was reflected only to a small degree in the last few weeks of the fiscal year. With this development the marketing, refining and transportation phases of the business are completely balanced by large crude reserves.

AGENCY HELPS TRADE

The entirely favorable reaction of the window glass trade to last week's announcement of the formation of a new selling organization featured the week's developments in the flat glass industry, according to the American Glass Review.

With the new sales agency fairly launched, a decided improvement of marketing trends in this branch seems assured. The attitude of leading factors among both manufacturers and distributors, as a result of the successful consummation of this movement, is one of renewed confidence and reassurance as to the outlook for the remainder of the year.

The new selling agency, which will handle the production of independent manufacturers of window glass, has opened its offices in Kansas City, Toledo and New York, and is reported now functioning smoothly. In an announcement to the trade this week the selling company reaffirms, in all major essentials, the present window glass discounts.

USES INCREASE FOR COTTON

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Despite the decrees of fashion and the popularity of other fabrics, the average person uses more cotton cloth than did his ancestors 30 years ago, according to the Cotton-Textile Institute.

The fact that per capita consumption of cotton cloth is nearly 20 per cent greater than it was in 1900, despite the decline in its use for wearing apparel is explained by Paul B. Halstead, secretary of the institute.

"The answer is," explains Mr. Halstead, "that extensive new markets for cotton goods, notably in the manufacture of automobiles, artificial leather, rubberized fabrics and home decoration has offset the decline in consumption of cotton for wearing apparel."

HURT BY URN $15,000 ASKED

Having suffered concussion of the brain and other hurts when an an urn weighing 50 pounds fell and injured Rita McDonough, suit for $15,000 damages has been brought against Joseph S. Gravant, owner of the premises at 1810 Crosby street, by the mother, Mrs. Marie McDonough.

According to the bill of particulars filed in Common Pleas Court, the child was invited to play in the yard of Edward J. O'Connor, a tenant of Gravant. While on a cement wall, the urn tumbled as the child le

Adjournment Will Tend To Stimulate Earnings, Rail Spokesman Says

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, May 9.—Pessimism in regard to railroad securities is unwarranted provided an investor continues reasonably hopeful concerning relatively near term recovery of general business.

The slump in railroad earnings in the first quarter, running about 20 per cent, constituted merely an index of recession in trade. E. E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad and spokesman for the eastern railroad presidents, in answering my questions concerning the meaning of recent railroad statistics, said:

"Railroad net earnings for the first quarter of 1930 do not necessarily indicate a prolonged business decline. Business should show an upward trend in the second quarter and improve during the last half of the year and the latter period should be better than the same period of 1929."

Asked whether the depreciated earning power of the great carriers reflects an inadequate rate structure, as determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Mr. Loomis added:

"The present situation does not in itself reflect an inadequate rate structure. However, the continual whittling away of rates, which has cost the railroads since 1921 nearly $5,000,000,000, a situation met up to this time by increased efficiency of operation, will undoubtedly be felt more and more, and, it is, therefore, most important the early rate stabilization be secured. Unquestionably, there are many commodities on which the railroads are entitled to a better rate return and every consideration should be given along these lines, especially in view of the fact that they have not been permitted to earn the fair return promised them under the transportation act in any single year since its enactment in 1920."

SUGGESTS ADJOURNMENT

As a constructive step to help business, Mr. Loomes suggests the adjournment of Congress.

"The psychological effect of the adjournment of Congress will tend to stimulate business in general. This will naturally reflect itself in railroad earnings. It is the uncertainly as to what Congress is going to do that is apt to prove demoralizing to business in general."

Several higher-ups in the administration told me that business will move forward as soon as Congress has disposed of the tariff measure.

As chief executive of one of the smaller roads, Mr. Loomis has never been especially enthusiastic about the idea of broad consolidations. In commenting on the outlook for mergers, he said:

"As to railroad consolidations, no doubt there are some mergers that can be made which would result in economies. However, the estimated savings to be realized have been grossly exaggerated. The important factor is the continuance of service and competition in the interest of the public. It is conceded that at the present time the railroads are being operated with greater efficiency than at any time in their history."

Dealing with the effect of the slump in railroad earnings on railroad expenditures for the remainder of the year, Mr. Loomis pointed out:

"It is quite possible some railroads may find it necessary to curtail capital and maintenance expenditures. On the other hand, it is at a time like this, when business is slow, that railroads which have the funds should carry on improvements that will result in economies later.

"Passenger business generally unquestionably is on the decline. The short haul business is fast disappearing, and the only chance for improvement is when the highways become so crowded with automobiles, trucks and buses as to result in unreasonable delays. This may have the effect of turning back to the railroads some of the business which has been lost to those methods of transportation."

WORK TO GO FORWARD

The president of one of the great southern railways pointed out:

"It is not our purpose to curtail the large capital expenditures which we have already authorized for this year, and as to maintenance, it is our constant endeavor to maintain the property at a high standard."

His further observations included the subjoined:

"I believe the drop in earnings of representative railroads in the first quarter represents a temporary business recession rather than a permanent condition.

"At no time since the enactment of the transportation act of 1920 have the railroads as a whole earned the fair return contemplated in that act, but I do not believe it would be wise or feasible to undertake any increase in rates at this time.

"Undoubtedly, consolidations of railroads will enable some reduction in operating expenses, but I am inclined to believe this feature has been somewhat overemphasized.

"The outlook for freight car loadings for the second quarter in this territory is reasonably satisfactory. I would not care to hazard a guess regarding the second half of the year.

"The outlook for passenger traffic, so far as I can determine, is anything but encouraging."

Stock Exchange Topics

Steel Shares Firmer as Leaders Give Vent to Optimistic Views.

The leading steel stocks showed a progressively better tone during yesterday in response to the optimistic views of the leaders in that industry as expressed at the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute. Charles M. Schwab, head of the Institute, sees the industry emerging in a highly satisfactory manner from the period of severe test which it has been passing through. E. G. Grace, head of Bethlehem, went on record as believing a turn in the price situation is near, and James A. Farrell, head of the United States Steel Corporation, sees business today very good. Like his late predecessor, Mr. Farrell is a born optimist, as indicated by his contention that the production of the country is not down to 79 or 80 per cent, but up to 79 or 80 per cent.

Though it was reported that some of the larger operators who had rode the leading copper shares down had not only covered their short lines but taken substantial long positions in those shares, there seems to be no little confusion of opinion on just what the position of such individuals is at the moment. The story went the rounds yesterday that quite a few of the market's big guns had decided in favor of at least a short vacation, some taking off for the races at Pimlico and Jamaica, while others are understood to have retreated for the moment to nearby resorts. Judging from the falling off in trading activity to the lowest level in several months, there appeared to be plenty of evidence of the absence of many of these individuals.

Nevada Consolidated Copper did not participate very prominently in yesterday's further improvement in the copper shares. The group as a whole appeared to meet renewed brisk demand at intervals, influence by the reported pickup in consumer buying of the metal. Sales by early afternoon were reported to have passed the 9,000,000-pound mark, running considerably heavier than on Thursday. Nevada, however, had to contend with the publication of its first quarter results, showing 46 cents a share earned on the stock as against 66 cents a share in the December quarter, and $1.38 in the March quarter last year.

The offer of the United Corporation to exchange its stock on a pro rate basis for United Gas Improvement shares will expire with the close of business next Monday. It was reported in usually well-posted Wall street circles that tenders received under the plan so far have been exceptionally good. The offer apparently was originally made to a group of large holders of United Gas Improvement stock, but upon learning of the desire of other holders of substantial amounts of the latter issue to participate, the United Corporation extended its offer to all United Gas shareholders several weeks ago.

Estimates are heard that earnings of Case Threshing in the first quarter of this year were better than $11 a share. Talk of a split-up is again heard in many quarters. The stock has shown a tendency to move ahead every time the general market has given it an opportunity. Much of the buying which came into the issue early this year was through houses with middle western connections, and it is said these holdings have not been disturbed.

In several firms it is reported that there has been scale buying in Montgomery Ward recently by interests who have not been identified with the long side for some time. This may be in connection with the disclosure that the company is to build one of its largest retail units near New York City. Montgomery Ward was one of the stocks which was under pressure early in the year when the general list was holding steady to strong in most sessions. At that time it was known that earnings were not favorable because of the retail merchandising situation. This is believed to have been corrected.

Pair Ask Court To Change Name

John W. Sadowski and his wife, Augusta M. Sadowski, 600 Delmont street, want to change their name to Burg. A petition asking permission to do so was filed yesterday before Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court. Sadowski has been known by many, he says, as Burke.

Anthony Named Election Judge

C. C. Anthony, 248 South Millvale avenue, has been appointed judge of elections for the Twenty-sixth District of the Eighth Ward by Judge Harry H. Rowand in Quarter Sessions court. He replaces John A. Cochran, who resigned when appointed to a city job.

CALIF. PACKING SUBSIDIARY FORMED

Company Plans Expansion In Philippines; Earned $6.16 a Share Last Year

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—Formation of a new company in the Philippines and additional plant expansion, involving $5,000,000 bank borrowing and more than $2,000,000 investment in other companies, were reported by California Packing Corp. in its annual report for the year ended February 28.

Net profit last year of $6,024,349 after all charges, including depreciation and taxes, equivalent to $6.16 a share on the 977,416 shares of common stock issued compared with $6,233,021, or $6.38 a share in the year ended February 28, 1929.

The Philippine Packing Corporation was organized to handle California Packing's Philippine operations. The new company will operate as a wholly-owned subsidiary and its formation exemplifies the corporation's policy of organizing subsidiaries in various parts of the world to handle operations in specific territories.

CASH REDUCED

As of February 28, 1930, cash represented 8.1 per cent of the corporation's total current assets as against 9.05 per cent as of February 28, 1929. This compares with 10.25 per cent in 1928 and 9.75 per cent in 1927.

R. I. Bentley, president, indicates in his letter to stockholders that plant expansions are nearly complete and that the Philippine pineapple situation is favorable. A pack of 150,000 cases is probable. The corporation owns some pineapple land in the Philippines, leases some and has arranged to take care of the pack of neighboring pineapple growers. While the Haiti acreage is not so extensive as that in the Philippines, sufficient raw product is available to warrant construction of a plant there. This plant is now practically completed.

EVENTFUL YEAR

Mr. Bentley says that the last fiscal year was an eventful one for the corporation. Worldwide depreciation of commodity values, coupled with the stock market decline, seriously affected both domestic and export business. He said:

"Business on all commodities, excepting fruits, exceeded the previous year and, if fruits had been available at reasonable prices, I can safely state that 1929 would have exceeded 1928."

California Packing paid out $3,209,664 in regular dividends last year, the same amount as in the previous year, and transferred $2,114,685 to surplus. This brought total surplus at end of the corporation's fiscal year to $27,351,954. In the fiscal year ended February 28, 1929, the corporation added $2,323,357 to surplus.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

FOUR LOUDSPEAKERS aboard the SS. Eleanor Bolling will be in operation at 11:25 tonight to pick up the KDKA program of Jack Denny dance music and special messages sent Admiral Byrd and his crew returning from their Antarctic Expedition. Byrd, William Haines and Dick Konter will hear the program on the SS. Rangitiki, which is preceding the Eleanor Bolling to Panama.

The expedition has enjoyed the KDKA special broadcasts immensely and they were of inestimable value in building up the morale of the men, Admiral Byrd informed KDKA in a radiogram this week. The message stated that KDKA signals were very clear in the Antarctic.

Music will be played specially tonight for Dr. Herbert Spencer Dickey, who has radioed KDKA that last Saturday's concert was quite audible in the jungles of South America along the Orinoco River—4,500 miles away.

Whether you are a boop-boop-adoop fan or not, you must hand it to Helen Kane, the sweet little baby doll singer who entertained KQV listeners last night.

She's only a mite . . . hardly more than five feet four inches tall. And she has dimples in her cheeks, a twinkle in her eye and a smile for everyone.

Ever know that sweet Miss Helen played the Davis two years ago as Dorothy Shrover?

She held a hoop for an acrobat.

We like the natural way she sings. When whispering sweet nothings she almost kisses the microphone.

Outside the studio three elevator girls waited nervously to see the debonair Dick Powell.

The one who said he wasn't dressed in green certainly got a thrill out of somebody else.

How they sank that British ship last night in the Freedom sketch isn't even the King's business. It is Billy Williams' business—and when he sinks ships they stay sunk!

Guess what? Edith Mason, the Chicago Grand Opera star, will entertain on the first Westinghouse Salute to be broadcast from Pittsburgh, June 10.

With this exception the production will be 100 per cent Pittsburgh talent—Frederick G. Rodgers, director, and music by the pioneer radio units led by T. J. Vastine and Victor Saudek.

SHOW 'EM HOW, FRED!

Things were very flowery at KDKA yesterday. First a basket of roses for the Little German Band from Maybelle Mayberry, of Monessen, Pa., and an hour later the anonuncement that G. Dare Fleck and Oliver Morton had departed for Evans City to visit the famous Tulip Show held there annually.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Everyone did a good job in that KDKA naval battle last night. As creator of the turbulent waves, William A. Farren handled the pebble shaker with dexterity and later was tagged "Steamboat Bill' by his associates.

The play deals with servants and their problems. There are three women in the cast, all servants in the kitchen of an English home. The scullery maid, Emily, is a homely, unschooled woman, who has been unfortunate in her parentage as well as her looks, with the result that she has had no social life.
Working in a home where the social life has been glittering and being gifted with a too vivid imagination, she creates a boy friend. In order to substantiate her story she steals a letter from the daughter of her employer, and this leads to trouble.

GIRL UNAFRAID

By GLADYS JOHNSON

Ardeth Thrilled at Tom's Mountain Place

CHAPTER XXVIII.

During the long drive up to the cabin with Fred Eastwood, Ardeth had the sensation of moving through some pleasant story.

Her life held no precedent for anything like this. The pleasures, the little luxuries which Jeanette and Cecile—Phyllis Hawkins, even Mary Eastwood took as their natural due, held the thrill of novelty for her.

Was this really Ardeth Carroll, leaning luxuriantly back in the big car as it climbed steadily into the mountains.

Just to intensify the pleasure of the moment, she let her thoughts drift back. Suppose she could have foreseen this in the gloomy days of the Harrison flat. Then it had been a treat to go out driving at night in Neil's cut-down car. How strange, that she had been that same girl . . . Aunt Stel—Bet—Neil, her first "beau"—Neil whom she had vaguely thought she would one day marry—they had taken on the dim outline of a dream.

But when she thought of Ken, at that very moment impatiently awaiting them, she glowed with a sweet and heady happiness as though golden wine bubbled through her veins.

Glancing down at her, Fred Eastwood grinned.

"You look as though you'd just bought and paid for the whole country."

She crinkled amber eyes at him. "I have! Mountains and trees and that little brook we passed over back there. And that patch of snow. Especially that patch of snow. Just think—I never saw snow before today."

She gave an ecstastic wiggle. "Like a kid—" Fred afterwards confided to his wife. "Like a little kid that had never had many good times."

Air of Unreality

More snow, not just white patches lurking in sheltered places, but long banks of it. Great masses of cotton, weighing down the dark branches of fir and pine.

Before long the whole country lay under a cloak of white—and the wheels of the tires crunched on the snow as though they spun through course salt.

When they reached the cabin the air of unreality deepened. They might have been moving through a Christmas card, so picturesque with the building with heavy masses of snow clinging to its gables and dormer windows.

At the sound of the car's horn one casement window flew open and Mary and Phyllis Hawkins stuck out their heads with shrill shouts of welcome.

At the same moment Tom and Ken appeared on the porch, wearing rough trousers, heavy sweaters and high laced boots. Ken reached the car first and, lifting the girl, carried her over the wooden porch streaked with mud and half-melted snow.

He poised his laughing face a few inches above her own. "Hello, my girl!" he whispered. "I've a good mind to kiss you right here and give them all a thrill!"

Mary Eastwood's voice sounded behind them in mock severity. "Ken, put that poor girl down and let her get her breath. Here—if you feel so strong, help Tom pack those suitcases upstairs."

Wears New Clothing

And still the glorious sense of unfamiliarity persisted. A long living room, its low, wide windows framing vistas of snowy hillsides and dark pines. Comfortable wicker furniture, side curtains of turkey red at the windows. On the walls hung a couple of Indian blankets to supply a note of warm color. Altogether a restful, friendly room, thought the girl. Nothing to tell her of that sweet and bitter time to come, when this room would witness the strangest decision of her life . . .

Mary Eastwood swept upstairs on a flood of words.

"Get into your snow things—you did bring sport clothes, didn't you, Ardeth? You won't have a bit of fun until you change. We're going out on the toboggan. We were there all morning. It's gorgeous fun!"

Ardeth changed her clothes in the small bare bedroom assigned to her, pulling on the new sports rig with hands made clumsy with joyous excitement.

When she had bought these things the expense had frightened her a bit. A silly thing to do—when she needed dresses for every day. But the thought of Ken turned the tide. The other girls would dress appropriately. She couldn't let Ken be ashamed of her.

Tweed breeches and high laced elkskin boots. White sweater bordered with black and red. A white cap pulled down on her bright hair until it framed her glowing face. She was glad she had brought the things when she looked in the mirror.

Girls Aloof

Seven pairs of eyes leaped toward her as she came down the stairs into the living room—appraising, admiring, caressing.

Bill Lane, a tall thin fellow with horn-rimmed glasses, spoke. "I saw her first! Give me the first ride down the slide, Miss Carroll!"

"Oh, no you don't!" There was unnecessary vigor in Tom's voice. "I asked her up here!"

They clattered out on the wooden porch, their heavy boots sounding like an invading army.

For the first few moments the other two girls held aloof, inclined to be affronted that this girl who worked for Jeanette should be included in their number. But Mary Eastwood's matter-of-fact manner, above all the attitude of the men, helped them make up their minds. Whoever tried to snub Ardeth Carroll was going to find herself in the discard, that much was easy to see. That settled it for Phyllis and Maida.

The toboggan had been built on a long hill skirting the small town a mile from the cabin. At the bottom of the grade a snorting, important little donkey-engine pulled a steel cable up to the crest.

Tom Angered

Suddenly snatching Ardeth's hand, Ken ran her laughing and breathless over to the sleds. He hooked a bob-sled over the cable and pulled her down with him as it started up the grade, grinning derisively at the outraged Tom who had pelted after them.

"Think I was going to let old Tom get away with my girl?" Ken asked triumphantly.

Laughter and triumph bubbling in Ardeth's heart. Glorious, to be young and wanted! To be sitting cross-legged like this on the sled with Ken, her cheeks glowing in the crisp cold air.

They were hung between heaven and earth on the snowy slope—between the crowd at the bottom of the grade and the little group at the top.

Ken bent his head close to her own. "Kiss me!" he ordered, his eyes brimming with love and laughter.

Long after Ardeth remembered the incident in its smallest detail. No foreboding chill to tell her of the future . . . Nothing to prepare her . . . She stood at the end of her happiness and thought it was the beginning.

KREMER TO OPPOSE ROBINS

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Hurlers' Toughest Year. Few Able to Go Route. Heydler for Day Ball. | Buc Form Reversals. Gallant Fox's Task. Thompson Wins Title.

LIFT 193 OF 230 STARTING PITCHERS

AFTER HE HAD blanked the Robins for five innings and held them to two runs in seven rounds at Forbes Field yesterday, it looked as if Jess Petty would treat the home fans to a real ball game and prove the first Pirate pitcher in two weeks to go the distance. But a few minutes later he was en route to the open plumbing, and he was followed in short order by William Watson Clark, his slab opponent in what had started out like an old-time hurling battle. It was Petty's third start of the year and the third time he failed to last the route. It was Clark's fifth start and the fourth time he was lifted, though in justice to him it must be said that on the first of these occasions he pitched a one-run game and was taken out only for a pinch-hitter in the late stages.

Jess Petty.

The latest double-derricking at the local park is just some more evidence added to the heap previously piled up that it's about the toughest season on record for pitchers. It isn't only in Pittsburgh that the rabbit ball is making life a burden to them, but all around the circuits of both major leagues.

WHEN THE RECORDS for the season to date are summed up, some startling figures stare you in the face as an attest of the woes that are besetting the flingers these days in consequence of the liveliness of the ball. In only 40 per cent of the games played in each big league have the pitchers who started the contests been able to stick it out to the finish.

Seventy-nine games have been played in the National, which means that 158 pitchers started. Only 62 of these finished and 96 were taken out. Eighty-one games have been played in the American, and of the 162 hurlers who started only 65 went the route and 97 were lifted. The two leagues have played a grand total of 160 games, and out of 320 starting pitchers only 127 completed their contests while 193 were derricked before the finish. An average of three pitchers out of every five that started had to be relieved.

CIRCUMSTANCES HAVE MADE Jewel Ens the holder of the undesirable record of having changed pitchers in more consecutive games than any other manager in the big show. The Pirate chief has been forced to use two or more flingers in every one of the last 12 engagements.

All told, he has pressed 31 pitchers in that time, an average of almost three to a game. No Pittsburgh moundsman has gone the route since April 26, when Ervin Brame turned in a full game against the Cardinals. And even that game ended in the big score of 9 to 7.

Jewel Ens.

BUT THE PITTSBURGH pitchers have not been alone in their troubles. The suffering has been general throughout the two leagues, and on practically every club complete games by the starting chuckers have been the exception rather than the rule. The world champion Athletics at one stage ran up a string of slab shifts almost equal to that of the Buccaneers, changing hillmen in nine straight contests. But since that time the A's have set another record by going through the last nine games without shifting pitchers in any tilt. No other club has approached that. The Cubs are next with six successive games in which pitchers were not changed, and the Pirates and Red Sox are tied for third honors with four straight. The Bucs had their streak in their fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth games of the year.*

IN THE NATIONAL League, Pittsburgh and Brooklyn pitchers have gone the route only six times in 20 games; New York, only five times in 18 games, and three of the five complete numbers were pitched by Bill Walker; Philadelphia, six times in 18 games; St. Louis, eight times in 21 games; Cincinnati, eight times in 20 games; Boston, nine times in 18 games, and Chicago, 14 times in 23 games.

In the American League, New York and Chicago starting pitchers have lasted the full distance only five times in 18 games; Washington, seven times in 21 games; Cleveland, seven times in 19 games; Detroit, eight times in 24 games; St. Louis, 10 times in 21 games; Philadelphia, 11 times in 20 games, and Boston, 12 times in 21 games.

IF BASEBALL GAMES ever are played at night in the big loops, it will be a great surprise to John A. Heydler, president of the National League. It will also be without his consent or approval. As a major league proposition, the head of the senior circuit just can't see the stunt introduced recently at Des Moines in the Western League.

While in Pittsburgh this week on his swing around the Western wheel of the National League circuit, President Heydler was asked to give his views of night baseball and the possibility of its ever being taken up by the majors. He replied that he considers baseball a daylight game and expects never to see it changed in the big show.

John A. Heydler.

"PERSONALLY, I BELIEVE that baseball is essentially a game to be played in the sunlight," said the National League chief, "and as long as I am connected with the sport I will not favor its being played under artificial conditions. To my mind, it is a game that can be played properly only by the light of day, and I cannot conceive of its being played well under flood lights. Those conditions may be all right for some sports, football, for instance, in which there is a large object that is easy to see and that does not travel great distances at any time. But they are not suitable to such a highly scientific game as baseball, in which every pitch is delivered with a motive and is important in itself. I do not believe these scientific standards in pitching, batting and fielding can be attained under an artificial lighting system. Often, too, the night brings fogs and kindred conditions that cannot be overcome by flood lights. I do not expect ever to see the time when baseball in the major leagues is played at night."*

IN LOSING SEVEN of their last nine and eight of their last 11 games, the Pirates have shown unusual form reversals. Instead of finding any advantage in playing on their home grounds, they have lost six out of 10 contests there, only .400 ball, whereas on the road they have won seven out of 10, a .700 clip. Against the West they have won nine out of 12 games, while against the supposedly weaker East they have won only two out of eight.

Johnny Frederick's home run yesterday kept up the four-base epidemic of which the Pittsburgh pitchers have been victims all spring. That makes a total of 26 homers cracked out against the Pirate flingers since the season opened, and 23 of them have been crowded into the last 14 games. In only four of their 20 contests have the Buc flingers escaped being slammed for at least one round trip.

GALLANT FOX, with Earl Sande in the saddle, having done the expected by winning the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico yesterday, the speculation of turf fans now turns to the question of whether he can follow up the victory by capturing the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs next Saturday, should Owner William Woodward decide to

NEGRO RUSHED TO HOSPITAL AFTER BOUT

DETROIT, May 10.—(AP.)—Jack Thompson, newly crowned welterweight champion boxer, was taken to a hospital early today because of profuse bleeding of the eyes and nose, which started after his victorious fight with Jackie Fields.

The boxer's condition was listed at the hospital as "temporarily serious."

Dr. Nathan Schlafer, who was present at the fight and later cared for Thompson, said the Negro boxer was suffering from renal contusions.

In one of the most startling upsets in years, Thompson with the heart of a lion and the boxing skill of a Joe Gans, decisively defeated Fields, the titleholder, in a blistering 15-round battle in the Olympia Arena last night.

After the last punch went flying through the air, Elmer (Slim) McClelland, the referee, unhesitatingly raised the Negro's hand in victory. The crowd of 15,000 roared its approval. Fields, champion of less than a year, buried his head in his hands as he sat in his corner, crushed in defeat and cried like a baby. He won the title July 25, last year, when he defeated the tottering Joe Dundee on a foul in two rounds.

EMULATES WOLCOTT

Thompson, the new champion, is the first Negro to win the world welterweight title in 29 years, since Joe Wolcott won the honor from Rube Ferns by knocking him out in five rounds.

Thompson won the fight decisively and cleanly. He won 10 of the 15 rounds with Fileds taking three, and two—the ninth and twelfth—being even. Thompson, a master boxer, with the ring craftiness of the old master, Gans, fought a smart, cagey battle. He had Fields so tired and leg-weary after the tenth round that the champion hardly had sufficient strength to fight back.

Thompson himself came dangerously near being knocked out in the second round, but after that he swamped all over the champion, scoring repeatedly with vicious right uppercuts to the chin and left hooks to the body. In the second round the crowd was on its feet with excitement as Fields cracked Thompson with a sharp right cross to the chin that staggered him and made his knees buckle for an instant.

Fields tore into his injured foe and whipped three more rights to

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Your Uncle Nick used to believe everything he read in the papers, even the weather predictions and the comic strips but that was before this year. I only have to go back one month in my scrap book to see where the experts said the Phillies were pennant contenders in the National. Now look at 'em. If the Phillies start fighting for the lead they are in good position for a rear attack. They had better get out of the cellar pretty quick or the league will have to build a sub basement for the Braves.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: JOHNNY RIECK HUNG UPSIDE DOWN—By constant practice in the performance of this feat, Rieck finally established a record of 1 hour 57½ minutes for hanging upside down. He also is able to drink and eat while remaining in this position. Rieck lives at 154½ Surf avenue, Ocean Park, Cal. GYPSIES DO NOT COME FROM EGYPT—The name "Gypsy" is a corruption of the word "Egyptian," which was supposed to be the origin of the tribe. This assumption has been proved erroneous. Scientific evidence points to their having migrated from India, whence they spread all over the world, many centuries ago. ATE HIS WAY THROUGH AN 18-INCH WALL OF CHEESE—Herman Osterweil ate himself through an 18-inch wall of cheese as a result of the bizarre challenge. His Dutch sweetheart, having to choose between two candidates wooing her, made this accomplishment a condition for obtaining her hand. Osterweil won and married the girl. This story has been extensively covered by German and Dutch papers. A CAMEL CAN SEE WITH ITS EYES SHUT—The camel has been adapted by nature to withstand the sudden and violent sandstorms which occur in the desert wastes over which is travels. It has valve-like nostrils, which shut out sand grains. The eyes are provided with a double eyelid. One lid is transparent and the camel can see through it.

The Traynorless, Loyd Wanerless Pirates are floundering dangerously close to the .500 reefs of the National League sea and unless their pitchers begin to show improvement soon, the Buccaneer craft will be trailing with some of the slow boats.

CRUCIAL PLAY

Here is the play that ended the Pirates' chances of winning over the Brooklyn Robins at Forbes Field yesterday. They scored four runs in the eighth inning and had the bases full with one out when Suhr hit into a double play, Pitcher Dudley to Catcher Lopez to First Baseman Bissonnette, retiring the side. Photo shows the force play on Flagstead at the plate. The Robins won, 7 to 4.

Ensmen today will make a determined effort to stop the skidding as they take on Uncle Robbie's Brooklyn crew in the second game of the series.

KREMER TO HURL

Remy Kremer and Jim Elliott will clash on the mound this afternoon. The latter is a big southpaw.

Pie Traynor was out of action yesterday by orders of his eye specialist. Pie's ailing optic was treated and he was not in shape to go to his post. It is doubtful whether he will play today. In his place yesterday was the reliable Charlie Engle, who contributed a fine hit to the eighth-inning rally.

With Glenn Wright in a heroic role, the Robins took the measure of the Pirates yesterday. The score was 7 to 4. It fell to the good fortune of the former Pirate shortstop to drive in the first run of the battle after the two teams had fought on a runless basis through five rounds. Wright connected for a second hit in the

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUGS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

Well, folks, I wouldn't be surprised if Jule starts morning practice for the pitchers if this thing keeps up much longer. Jule says he is anxiously waitin' for some flinger to go nine innings, but he said it in a nice way and he throwers certainly would like to stay in there and stop a team.

I felt like sayin' I bet it would be a lefthander who goes the distance first, but on second thought I thought I'd better not make a wise crack like that on such a serious matter. Us southpaws are supposed to be daffy and all that, but sometimes we don't talk out of turn.

GIANTS GETS MANICURE

And speakin' about lefthanders, folks, I saw one of McGraw's pitchers gettin' a manicure the other day, and he wasn't a lefthander. Gee, I was wishin' McGraw walked in when that bird was gettin' everything on him they had in the shop, includin' the manicure. You know most of McGraw's pitchers can't go more than three innings and I don't think he's so strong for the dude stuff. I've heard a lot about those Orioles that he played with. I'll bet if one of them fellas saw a ballplayer getting a manicure they would give him a fine reception on the field the next day. From what I hear, McGraw and the rest of those guys used to manicure the other players with their spikes on the way around the bases.

Don't think Jess Petty didn't pitch a good game yesterday. Jess got the worst of the breaks on a couple of lucky grounders that got away from Dick. That boy has been playin' a whale of a game and it just happened when

NET VARSITIES PLAY TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Varsity racquet action will strike full stride this afternoon with all three local college net squads meeting sturdy opposition, the Pitt Panthers of Dr. Billy McElroy and Coach B. P. Hoover's Carnegie Tech array being set to repel invaders of home reciangles while Grant Siverd's Dukes jaunt to Meadville for a thrust at the strong Allegheny combine.

Pitt, throwing wide the throttle for another undefeated campaign, will entertain Bethany at the Stadium. The Bisons have already suffered a 6-1 reversal at the hands of O'Loughlin, Jacobs and company. Their chance of improving upon this showing today is rather remote.

The Tartans are billed to tangle with friendly foe in their weekend tussle, the annual Alumni affair holding the spotlight. Among the veteran Skibos slated to return for the fiesta are Jack Beatty, Jimmy O'Connor, Art Glaser, Bob Schmertz, and possibly Toots Davis.

Duquesne, smarting under the lash of 6-1 setback at the hands of Geneva last Wednesday, will visit Meadville with dogged resolve to slash back into victorious ways. Inspired by the showing of Capt. Andy Smeaton in downing the redoubtable Johnny Hecker, Covenanter flash, and aiming to profit by post-battle remarks of their mentors, the Bluffites should look vastly better in the tilt with the up-staters.

RESERVE AT SHADY SIDE.

The Shady Side Academy nine will meet Western Reserve Academy, of Hudson, O., on the Shady Side diamond this afternoon. The local team has broken even in the six games played so far.

Sport Vignettes

The world's greatest amateur sportsman, Sir Thomas Lipton, is back for another challenge for the America's Cup, emblematic of the world yacht-racing championship . . . . The races will be staged in September and will provide a lot of colorful reading. . . . Sir Thomas has been a steady challenger since 1898, when he took up the burden of trying to regain for the Old World the trophy captured by this country in the regatta off the Isle of Wight 'way back in 1851 . . . . In that time he has challenged five times with his famous Shamrocks, and this year's races will see his Shamrock V in action against the best racing craft we can produce . . . . The genial Irishman, a magnificent loser, has spent an immense fortune in his quest for the trophy over the 22-year span and if success should crown his efforts this time it is to be hoped that we will prove as gracious in defeat as he has been . . . . This will mark America's fourteenth defense of the mug . . . . Lipton's yachts first raced against America's best, the Columbia, in 1899, and lost, three races to none . . . . His second challenge was made in 1901, when the Columbia defeated the Shamrock II, again by three races to none. . . . . In 1903, the Reliance blanked the Shamrock III by the same score . . . . It was not until 1914 that Lipton could get another challenge accepted, and then only because there were no other challengers . . . . His Shamrock IV set sail on the eve of the World War and while at sea her skipper learned of the hostilities and put in at Bermuda to escape sea raiders, later going to Brooklyn, where the craft was laid up pending more favorable times . . . . It was not until six years later, in 1920, with the war at an end, that the yacht could be refitted for service, and then Sir Lipton had the satisfaction of making his first serious bid for victory, winning two races against three in the series run off Sandy Hook against the Resolute, which was commanded by Charles Francis Adams, now Secretary of Navy . . . . And now comes Sir Thomas again, with his smile and hope and another Shamrock . . . . We couldn't lose, but if finally lose we must, to a true sportsman and sportsman!—HARRY KECK.

eighth that had a very important bearing on the result. And both of Glenn's singles were at the expense of the athlete for whom he was traded—Jess Petty.

The long "goose-egg" period came as a relief to the rabbit-ball spectacles that prevailed at Forbes Field during the stay of the Giants in Pittsburgh. The fans apparently were surprised to see two hurlers turning back batters in an old fashioned manner, but this trend was due largely to some beautiful fly-chasing on the part of the competing outfielders.

At least half dozen extra-base hits were spoiled during the course of the game by the clever ball hawks of the pasture. Paul Waner's catch of Bissonette's drive in the fourth was the prettiest fielding bit in the outfield. George Grantham turned in a circus assist to rob Frederick in the sixth.

Petty and William Watson Clark were the clever sharpshooters through most of the game, but both were missing before the finish arrived. Each left the game in the eighth round.

Wright's first hit, which started the runmaking, was somewhat scratchy, Bartell playing the ball poorly. It came with runners on second and first and one out. One Robin flew over and another went to third, from whence he tallied on a single by Bissonette.

ROBIN HITS HOMER

Bartell overran an ordinary grounder off Gilbert's bat to start the eighth and ere the enemy were retired they had made four runs, enough to clinch the game. Frederick hit a homer into the stands off Lil Stoner in the ninth as a safety measure.

The Pirates had four runs in the eighth, and enough on the sacks to win, with only one out, when Gus Suhr grounded into a double play. Clise Dudley was on the mound at this time, the young righthander forcing our new first-sacker to hit a grounder to the box for a tailor-made double shuffle. A single here would have tied up the battle.

FIELDS LOSES WELTER TITLE

the same spot and then hooked a left to the head. Thompson sagged for a moment and then covered up to escape. After wrestling Fileds in a clinch, the Negro suddenly lashed out with his favorite punch, right uppercuts to the jaw, and his danger was over.

With the exception of the second round there was not a semblance of a knockdown, although Thompson, a dangerous puncheh, was always on the alert to sneak over a finishing punch.

The battle was fought at the welterweight championship limit of 147 pounds. Both Fields and Thompson were under this figure when they weighed in at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Fields tipped the beam at 145¾, while Thompson was down to 142¾.

Thompson first came into ring importance when he scored a startling knockout over Joe Dundee at the time the Baltimore Italian was champion. This match was fought in Chicago two years ago and Thompson knocked out Dundee in two rounds. The title, however, was not involved as Dundee forced Thompson to weigh above the welterweight limit.

CHAMP'S PURSE $2,500

The new champion is 25 years old and has participated in more than 200 ring battles. Under the peculiarities of the financial arrangements for the contest he will get only $2,500, while Fields, the dethroned champion guaranteed $37,500 also will get a share of the purse that was to have gone to Thompson. This was the agreement, provided Fields lost.

The battle fell short of attracting a capacity house. It was estimated that the receipts amounted to between $60,000 and $70,000.

I felt pretty tough over yesterday's defeat, but I wasn't down as far as I was after that last game with the Giants. I heard Chic Fraser and some of the older fellows talkin' things over. They seem to think that when Pie and Lloyd get in there that the team will be hard to hold back. I guess they figure the pitchin' will steady up.

fourth. Seven others of the best 3-year-olds in training trailed.

After a poor start, due to the behavior of Armageddon, Gallant Fox was always well up in front, though the pace was set by one of the last-minute entries, Tetrarchal, of the Howe stable, and Crack Brigade.

Sande's mount earned $51,925 for William Woodward, owner of the Belair stud, and possession for a year of the Woodlawn vase, prized turf trophy dating from 1860. This Mr. Woodward received from the hands of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie after the finish, as the crowd, estimated at 40,000, cheered the victory of the lone Maryland entry.

It was the fifth time Sande had ridden in the Preakness. Last year he rode his own entry and finished last.

SCOTT CLIMBS NEARER TITLE

Johnny Reed's crack Scott High of North Braddock baseball team moved a step nearer to its second W. P. I. A. L. diamond championship yesterday in the feature school tilt of the day, defeating Edgewood 4 to 1 in a Section II contest.

The victory, the fifth in a row for Scott, practically clinched the section title for the Reedmen, insuring their entry into the championship playoffs.

HURLER FANS SEVEN

McMullen, hurling for Scott, fanned seven Edgewood batsmen and permitted but three safe hits. Buck pitched well for Edgewood, but Scott's hitting was timely.

In a second Section II contest, Wilkinsburg turned in a 6 to 4 triumph over Rankin, three runs in the final inning putting the game away.

Turtle Creek won a slugfest from McKeesport in Section 1, 12 to 11, two runs in the final frame bringing the victory. In Section III, McKees Rocks signalized its return to form by taking over Mt. Lebanon, 14 to 9, and Crafton continued its winning streak at the expense of Dormont, with a 6 to 5 victory.

VOCATIONAL WINS

In the City League, Allegheny Vocational upset the dope by defeating Westinghouse 8 to 6 in the only Section I affair of the day. In Section II, Allegheny nosed out Carrick 7 to 6, and South Hills walloped the staggering Langley team, 8 to 0. Langley was helpless before the hurling of Haden, who gave up but two safe hits.

Long's Sport Comment

start him there instead of keeping him in the East for the rich Belmont.

There is hardly any doubt that if Gallant Fox starts in the Derby he will be the favorite, and on the form he showed yesterday and in the Wood Memorial previously he will look hard to beat. Yet tradition will be against him, for winning both the Preakness and the Derby is so big a contract that out of the many horses that have tried only one ever got away with it. Sir Barton, in 1919, was the lone exception.

Jack Thompson.

YOUNG JACK THOMPSON'S capture of the world welterweight title championship by winning the decision over Jackie Fields in their 15-round title bout at Detroit last night came as a surprise to the great majority of fight followers and was a complete upset of the advance dope that had made Fields a 2-to-1 favorite and caused him to look like a certain winner. Not only had Fields defeated Thompson in two previous bouts in 1928 and 1929, but the Negro, though still admitted to be dangerous, was thought to have lost considerable of the ability he possessed a couple of years ago. Fields himself picked him as a foe in preference to Jimmy McLarnin. But there can be no questioning the justice of the decision. Reports show that Thompson's victory was clean cut and decisive, that he won practically all the way and was clearly entitled to the verdict and the crown that went with it.

THOMPSON IS THE first Negro to hold the welterweight honors since Joe Wolcott lost the championship of that class to Honey Mellody on October 16, 1906. He takes a place in a line of champions of his race that include, in addition to Walcott, George Dixon, bantamweight and featherweight; Joe Gans, lightweight; Tiger Flowers, middleweight, and Jack Johnson, heavyweight.

With Panama Al Brown heading the bantamweight brigade, there are now two Negro champions, and, besides, Kid Chocolate looks like a sure shot for the featherweight throne and Larry Johnson may have to be reckoned with again later in the light-heavyweight division.

TURTLE CREEK, NEVILLE WIN IN MEET

The strongly balanced Turtle Creek team scored a smashing victory in the borough division of the annual Allegheny County grade school track and field championships yesterday afternoon at Schenley Oval. In the township division, Neville finished in front, but not by the margin that Turtle Creek piled up.

Turtle Creek scored 83 points in scoring its triumph, with Brentwood finishing second, with 28. Whitaker was third with 26; Avalon tallied 20; Edgewood, 14; Port Vue, 13; Versailles, 8 and Millvale, 6.

Collier finished second to Neville in the township competition, with a total of 38 points. Mifflin had 35 for third; West Deer 31 for fourth; Wilkins 21 for fifth; Patton 12 for sixth; Jefferson 11 for seventh and Reserve and Shaler each scored three points. The summary:

GRAYS PERFORM HERE

YOUNGSTOWN TO PROVIDE OPPOSITION

By TOM BIRKS.

Independent contests feature today's sandlot baseball card, with the Homestead Grays offering a local tidbit by opening their home season at Forbes Field, meeting Frank Mills' Youngstown team. This game will be played after the Pirate-Brooklyn contest.

In the Steel City League, the East Liberty Crimsons will open their home season at Mellon Field, the East End Cardinals providing the opposition.

Manager Cohn has lined up a strong ball club, with a line-up of hustling boys, and seeing that the Cardinals lost their game with Lincoln Place, a torrid battle should take place.

The twilight session at the home of the Pirates will give Pittsburgh's followers of the Posey organization a chance to see the 1930 edition of the American Negro League entry. The team is said to be the strongest Posey has ever gathered together here.

CARROLL TO HURL

Many of the Dormont players will be on the club headed by Mills. It is expected that Leo Carroll will twirl for Youngstown, opposed to Williams.

Dormont had its opening game, parade, flag raising and all the frills that go with it last evening. Burgess Chamberlain threw the first ball and President of Council Winters was on the receiving end. Stowe provided the opposition. Eddie Kelly's triple with the bases loaded broke up a perfectly good ball game, Dormont winning, 8 to 1.

In the Crafton-Ingram Church League, St. Phillips defeated the Methodists, 9 to 2. St. Adelberts took a Major League contest from the Hoffmans, 6 to 2, and in the City League the fast-stepping Book Shoe nine made it three straight by defeating Pleasant Valley, 8 to 5.

UNIVERSAL LOSES

The Homestead Aces defeated Edgewood, 10 to 4, in the Greater Pittsburgh League. North Bessemer hammered out a 7 to 2 triumph over Universal in the West Penn circuit and in the C. & I., Reliance Life walloped Mine Safety, 14 to 1, and Carnegie Steel topped Joseph Hornes, 8 to 7.

The Homestead Grays blanked Jimmy Smith's, 12 to 0; Homewood downed J. L. Thomas, 7 to 2; Dan Heeps defeated New Kensington, 13 to 1; Mt. Lebanon trimmed Fintex, 7 to 4, and Ingomar won over the Brown Stars, 8 to 2, in other independent battles.

Quailey Seriously Ill After Operation

Dr. C. B. Quailey, Fourth Ward alderman and former University of Pittsburgh football star, is seriously ill in the West Penn Hospital following an operation for gallstones.

Attaches at the hospital last night said that Dr. Quailey's condition was "fairly good," while earlier in the day reports were current that his condition was "not very good."

The operation was performed yesterday to relieve a gallstone condition. The Oakland dentist has been confined to the hospital several days undergoing treatment to prepare him for the serious ordeal.

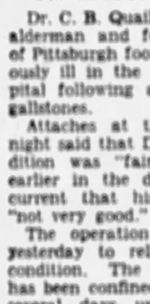
WESLEY WALTHOUR.
Hannastown Golf Club.



Wes Walthour

Modest Wesley Walthour, professional at the Hannastown Golf Club, near Greensburg, doesn't blow his own horn at all—but that doesn't mean he isn't deserving of high commendation. At Hannastown, Tom Jamison's beautiful course, the members think Wes is one of the finest men they've ever had on the pro job, he sticks to his work, does it right and is always willing to inconvenience himself for the benefit of his members—and the members, by the way, make up one of the finest groups of golfers in the district. Hannastown being a real golfers' paradise, Walthour started playing as a caddie at eight years of age, at the Greensburg Country Club. At the tender age of 15 he was placed in charge of the shop, Greensburg having no professional at the time, he taking charge of the sale of balls and other equipment. He became assistant to Bill Chisholm in 1920 when he became pro at Greensburg, quitting later to become assistant to Jock Kennedy at the Country Club of Pittsburgh in 1926, staying at the same club, under George McBride, in 1927. Wesley's first regular pro job came in 1928 when he was appointed pro at Hannastown. Walthour holds the distinction of having won the first caddie-masters' and assistant professionals' championship of Western Pennsylvania, copping that gonfalon in 1926 at Longue Vue.—VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Wright, former shortstop star of the Pirates, who was out of the game for a time because of a bad shoulder, is in fine fettle again and playing a good game for the Brooklyn Robins. He is captain of the team. He handled five chances cleanly and made two hits against the Pirates at Forbes Field yesterday.

STRIPP'S ERROR BEATS REDS

Associated Press

So far this season, the American League has been reversing the usual order of things and producing a large number of pitching battles while the National League sluggers have held the upper hand. But the Cincinnati Reds have been doing their best to make the older circuit conform.

The season for the Reds seems to be just one close game after another whether they win or lose. They have been winning most of them for the past 10 days but only after some terrific struggles. Of the six victories and three defeats on their record in that time, all but three games have been decided by one run.

STRIPP'S ERROR COSTLY

Cincinnati engaged in its fourth successive close game yesterday, losing the series opener to Philadelphia, 3 to 1, through one costly error. Joe Stripp's bad throw to first in the second inning paved the way for two Phillie counters.

Through all the rest of the National League, only one other pitcher went the route Hal Carlson lasted nine innings while the Chicago Cubs took first place away from the New York Giants by beating them, 6 to 5.

Burleigh Grimes lost his chance to do something for the Boston Braves by being too polite to Umpire Mike Donohue. After protesting several decisions, Grimes found one he liked and his exaggerated thanks earned him a trip to the showers. Wee Willie Sherdel finally earned the Cardinals a 10 to 6 victory over the Braves.

Bill Clark of Brooklyn and Jess Petty of Pittsburgh engaged in a fine mound duel for seven innings but both departed suddenly as each team scored four runs in the eighth. Brooklyn won the game, 7 to 4.

BROWN, GROVE LEAD

Lloyd Brown, of Washington, and Bob Grove, of Philadelphia, went to the top of the American League pitchers as they each won game No. 4 with no defeats. Brown had a rather rocky time against the Chicago White Sox, giving 13 hits, but the Senators hit even harder and won by a 14 to 3 margin. Grove was effective after his usual bad first inning and the Athletics took the American League lead by beating Cleveland, 9 to 4.

George Uhle did somewhat better in the strikeout line against the New York Yankees, who count him something of a jinx. He fanned eight as Detroit won a 5 to 4 victory.

Danny MacFayden took his turn in combining pitching prowess with Tom Oliver's hitting to give the Boston Red Sox their third successive victory. He held the St. Louis Browns to six hits for a 5 to 2 triumph.

Ruth Tells Radio Hearers Rabbit Ball Myth

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth, in a radio talk last night over Station WABC in a coast-to-coast network, told his listeners that there "ain't no such animal as the rabbit ball."

"I tell you, this rabbit ball question is all a matter of good pitching," the Home Run King said. "For one thing, the umpires are forced to throw in too many new balls. That is tough on the pitcher. A new ball is naturally harder for a pitcher to grasp and control, and at the same time its bright, white surface is easier for the batter to hit.

"I thought the old bugaboo about the lively ball had died a natural death. In the opening week of this season—when Hallahan, of the Cards, held the Chicago Cubs to two measly hits—you didn't hear much about the rabbit ball. No, and you won't hear anything about it whenever the pitchers get the old ball breaking just where they want it to."

Between Rounds

Ralph Leamy, of New York, stablemate of Champion Batting Battalino, will box Andy Anderson, of the East End, in the eight-round semi-final go Battalino's bout with Vic Burrone of New York, featuring the opening of the Meyers Bowl in North Braddock, next Thursday night. Leamy recently boxed Harry Carlton and last Monday night scored a knockout at the Arena in Philadelphia.

The Willie Davies-Black Bill fight at the Meyers Bowl will be the third show of the season in that arena, and will be staged on the night of June 7. Johnny Indrisano, Boston welterweight, will meet the best opponent obtainable in the second show, on the night of May 26.

Eddie Mayes of Los Angeles, a flyweight, is in town seeking action.

Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, and Young Saylor, of Charleroi, will wind up their heavy training today for their main bout battle at Motor Square Garden Monday night. The show, which concludes the season at the Garden, promises to draw one of the largest crowds of the year there. It includes two other 10-round matches and a six-rounder.

RODGERS TO BOX IN MILLVALE ARENA

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

The second outdoor boxing arena in the Pittsburgh district will open its doors to the public May 23, exactly one week after the Meyers Bowl, in North Braddock, gets under way, next Thursday night, it was announced today by Charles P. Luck, of the North Side, who will be the matchmaker for the project.

The club will stage its shows in Hickey Park, an enclosed baseball grounds, in Millvale. Fred (Bus) Vogel, of Millvale, is the promoter. The park will be arranged to accommodate a crowd of 5,000. It is located within approximately 10 minutes' ride from the downtown section of Pittsburgh by automobile.

Present plans call for Jackie Rodgers to be one of the principals in the opening bout of the first show.

U. S. GOLFERS NEAR LEAD

SANDWICH, Eng., May 10.—(INS.)—Consistently low scores featured the early rounds of the St. George's grand challenge cup play over the Royal St. George's links here today.

In .....4 4 4 5 5 6 4 4 5—41—75

Here Are the Rules for "Piratepuz"

(1) Every day until farther notice the daily Sun-Telegraph will print a frame, or diagram in squares, each containing the letters that will, when placed in order, spell the name of a Pittsburgh Pirate baseball player.

(2) In this frame it may be possible that abbreviations and nicknames will be employed. The readers of the Sun-Telegraph in solving the daily PIRATEPUZ are to endeavor to submit as their answer the full, complete and correct name of the player, devoid of nickname or abbreviation, other than that of the middle initial if there happens to be one.

(3) This is a contest that will test the skill of the readers of the Sun-Telegraph as to their knowledge of the names of the players of the Pittsburgh club.

(4) There will be a new PIRATEPUZ every day and daily prizes for the correct and most nearly correct answers will be awarded as follows:

1st Prize .....$10.00 in Cash
2nd Prize ..... 5.00 in Cash
3rd Prize ..... 2.50 in Cash
Next 25 Prizes—Each a Grandstand General Admission ticket to the Pirates game, good any day during the season.

(5) Neatness in the preparation of answers submitted will be a factor in the judging. In case of ties, the contestants so tied will be given an equal award. The decision of the judges will be final in all cases.

Contestants agree that entries become the property of the Sun-Telegraph. The contest is open to everyone—men and women, boys and girls—no matter where they live, with the exception of employes of the Sun-Telegraph. You do not have to purchase a copy of the Sun-Telegraph to enter this contest. The files of the newspaper are available at the Sun-Telegraph Branch Office, Fifth avenue and Market street, where any person can copy or trace the puzzle.

(6) All answers must be addressed to the PIRATEPUZ Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and must be postmarked not later than midnight of the day following the publication of the PIRATEPUZ for which the answer is submitted. Contestants are requested to place the number of the puzzle on the box outside left-hand corner of the envelope.

DAILY TRUE STORY

There They Were!

Tim Converse stepped into the show window of the Hutton Sport Goods store, let his gaudy bathrobe slip from his shoulders and flexed his arms.

His arms were decidedly muscular.

He approached an exerciser and proceeded to use it in approved athletic fashion.

Someone paused to watch him. Someone else stopped to see what the first one was looking at. A third one paused. That started the crowd.

Tim was pleased. He enjoyed this sort of thing. he liked to have people stare through the thick plate glass at him. He loved to guess what they were saying about his marvelous biceps and about the muscular shoulders.

He changed to the punching bag, then to the rowing machine. He handled the Indian clubs for a while and then back to the pulley weights.

People crowded to watch him—people who had been dodging and rushing along as though they hadn't another 10 minutes left.

Maggie Shannon came down from Mlle. La Jeune's beauty parlor for her noon-day repast at the corner drug store. She skipped across the street like a jay-walker and edged her way through the crowd before the Hutton Sport Goods store window until her cute little nose tip was almost pressed against the glass.

"Gee—what a swell guy," she whispered to herself as she watched Tim Converse stand up and make the punching bag go rat-tat-a-tat.

She stared hard at him and smiled wistfully.

Tim didn't see her. He seldom saw anyone. He had acquired the stage trick of staring out and not seeing any particular person.

Then he yawned a little and picked up a bell-bar. He put it up 10 times as though a cream puff was at each end of the bar instead of the 100-pound weights.

Admires Tim

"Oh, bay-bee," Maggie whispered to herself, "ain't he swell? Oh, Mommer, buy me that! Some day I'm gonna try and meet him."

Maggie went on to her drug store counter and ordered carefully. She had to keep her figure and her complexion, not only because she worked in the beauty parlor and was supposed to be beautiful because of using the products, but also because she had just seen her pictures on the jars of "Ambrosia Cream." Maggie had been paid well for posing for that, and she was just beginning to get other profitable work posing for a commercial photographer.

For four days Maggie had watched, during her noon hour, the athletic young man in the sport goods shop window.

As may be guessed, he was her idea of the answer to a maiden's prayer, at least so far as she was concerned.

Tim was regularly employed by a concern that manufactured athletic goods. He went about from city to city and store to store giving window demonstrations of the manner in which these exercisers were supposed to make a combination Hercules-Adonis type out of any chap who bought and used them.

This happened to be Tim's home city. He lived with his married sister when here, although he had his permanent quarters in a big athletic club in a distant city, where the sport goods that he demonstrated were manufactured.

Tim was looking for something to make his hair stay back flat and sleek.

"It's onna bureau," his brother-in-law called up to him.

Tim found it, but he paused to examine a big squat jar. There was a picture of a girl on the cover. "The Ambrosia Girl," it said. The jar contained face cream.

For a couple of minutes Tim stared at the picture of the girl.

"Some dame," he said to his brother-in-law, who came into the room.

"Yeah? Thought you was offa dames."

"Sure— I got no use for 'em, they make a guy lose sleep and spend coin and keep him from stayin' fit. I gotter stay fit or I lose my swell job." Time explained, "but a guy can look at a picture, can't he? That artist sure made a corker."

Two Pictures

His brother-in-law examined it. He worked in an engraving plant and knew things.

"That's from a photograph, that's no paintin', Tim."

"Jees, think of a skirt bein' good lookin' like that!"

"Aw, photographers can make a dame look swell."

"Just th' same I'd like to meet th' little skirt that wears that swell map," Tim declared.

Tim finished his two weeks at the Hutton store and went on to another city.

Maggie noticed that the window display was gone the first thing the following Monday noon.

She sighed, and wished she had gone into the store to make some little purchase—something for her young brother. She might have found out the name of the handsome demonstrator.

This was a good idea, even then. Her brother had a birthday the following week. Maggie had done some more posing and decided that she could buy her brother some boxing gloves.

They were not professional gloves, but for amateur juveniles. And there on the cover of the box was a colored picture of the handsome young man she had seen in the window.

"Isn't that the chap who was in the show window?" she asked.

The clerk looked at the picture. "That's so," he agreed. "he works for the company that makes these gloves—goes around demonstrating. His name is Converse." Maggie was informed.

Maggie wrapped the gloves up carefully and gave them to her young brother. The picture on the cover of the box went into a cheap frame and was hung in her room.

If only Maggie Shannon could have looked into the room of Mr. Timothy Converse at the Atlantic Club in a distant city she would have got one big kick, for there was her picture stuck in a corner of a mirror—a picture that Tim had carefully soaked off from the cover to a jar of Ambrosia Cream!

It was months later, and quite warm weather, when Maggie went down town on an errand for Mlle. La Jeune.

There was a crowd around the window of the down-town branch of Amberson & Fletch, sporting good dealers. Maggie took a look for herself.

"O-o-o Gee!" she said, quite audibly.

Crowd Laughs

She was staring at Mr. Converse himself!

"I got to meet him some way," Maggie was telling herself.

Mr. Converse shifted over to the punching bag.

"What a beautiful sock that baby carries along with his good looks," Maggie was thinking.

Timothy Converse looked up toward the window. For a wonder, he saw Maggie. He had merely glanced out to see if he was getting an appreciative audience.

"Th' face cream dame!" he muttered as he paused and stared.

"Wham!"

The crowd outside laughed. Tim had forgotten for a moment that he was punching the bag. When he held his jabs to stare, the bag swung back and socked him one.

Maggie had no more than turned the corner when Tim strode out. Of course he couldn't find her. He was greatly disappointed.

But Maggie was late with her errand and Mlle. La Jeune was cross about it. They had already quarreled over the picture situation. Mlle. La Jeune wanted to use Maggie's picture to advertise some of her own wares. She thought Maggie should be glad to do it because she worked there. Mlle. La Jeune was surprised and ugly when Maggie told her what the Ambrosia Cream people paid her and demanded the same.

So when Mlle. La Jeune began to scold, Maggie put on her hat and quit the job.

She could make more posing or working for the Ambrosia people. Maggie had a good hunch. The Ambrosia wanted the original of their Ambrosia Girl for a demonstrator.

Maggie was almost happy. She was going about to various department stores, demonstrating the cream and getting four times as much as she did in the beauty parlor.

Then came the Saturday when Maggie's Sunday School had its yearly outing at the pavilion on Kelton Lake. Maggie wouldn't miss it for anything.

A Lucky Meeting

Maggie wanted to go canoeing. Her friends were afraid. Maggie was the sort who wouldn't let that stop her. She went alone, paddled down the shore and under a bridge at a narrow inlet. On the other side she saw some billboards and made out, through the foliage, the big words, Ambrosia Cream. Maggie went ashore and up the slope to look at it for she knew her picture would be there.

There she was, pretty good for billboard artistry. Then she gasped, for right alongside of her picture was another one—advertising Samson's Sport Goods. The picture was that of Mr. Converse, smilingly socking a punching bag.

Maggie sat down on the road embankment and stared. It was wonderful!

Someone came running down the highway at a dog-trot. He wore white shorts and a green jersey. He paused and stared at the billboard. Maggie slid off the embankment. He heard her and they stared at each other.

"Say—"

Both said it at once.

"Little lady," he said, "I been wantin' to meet you!"

"You got what you wanted, Converse!"

"Pretty swell, what. How come you know me? How about your giving me the same advantage?"

"Maggie Shannon."

"Tim Converse."

"Neither of us seem to be Scandinavians," Maggie said, with a giggle.

Then they got into the canoe for a while. Tim forgot all about finishing his 10-mile run to keep fit.

Tim's brother-in-law came along later in his little car. Tim introduced Maggie. He got into regulation clothes in the car and went to the outing for the dance with Maggie.

The brother-in-law went back to his family at the outing. He told his wife all about it, ending with, "—and when I got to them billboards there they were! You listen to me, they're goin' to be married right away!"

He was right about it.

What Happened to Uncle Sam?

Look at His Horses in This Steeplechase.

THE GRAND INTERNATIONAL. SOME "ALSO RANS!"

The Illustrated London News, under able management, sees events clearly.

This picture shows you what it thinks about the recent Naval Conference in London, and especially about Uncle Sam's contribution to the Conference.

You see our distinguished lightweight jockey, Mr. Stimson, in the rear going the wrong way, and other American representatives.

You see Britain, represented by MacDonald, over the fence first, as is usual in British diplomacy, and old Papa Briand a close second.

The British gentleman who prepared this picture and wrote the "copy" to go with it calls the Stimson horse "No Entanglement," And the Dwight Morrow horse "Maybe."

The following are extracts from the Britisher's comment, written in racegoer's lingo, as to the prospects of the race. Of Mr. Stimson's mount he writes:

"No Entanglement (Stimson)—Takes a bit of holding together, and his owner is fortunate in having been able to obtain the services of one of the strongest lightweights to ride him. He will probably prove something of a handful."

And Mr. Dwight Morrow's chances are described by the British writer as follows:

"Maybe (Dwight Morrow)—Is another who is not exactly a suitable mount for a boy. We understand, however, that if the luck proves to be on his side on the present occasion he is very likely to win."

The British writer congratulating Uncle Sam on "having been able to obtain one of the strongest lightweights" is a good bit of British humor.

Mr. Duncan Curry, a thoughtful person, remarks truthfully that talk about "parity of sea power between this country and Britain is silly, the British having more than 9,000 merchant ships, nearly all provided with gun-mountings, able to carry five, six or even 10-inch guns."

The talk about humanizing submarine warfare is most pitiful foolishness.

To demand that submarines come to the surface and make sure that crew and passengers are safe before sinking a ship is inviting the submarine to rise and be sunk.

If we had a war, as Mr. Curry points out, "the Aquitania, the Bremen or Ile-de France could come here with 10-inch guns and 200 or more airplanes on their decks to launch poison gas on American seaboard cities. And the United States' submarines could not sink them because they are called 'merchantmen.'"

'Safety First'

The Gunman's Humanitarian Slogan.

Makers of bulletproof glass for autos will be interested in news that their product is finding a ready market among gangsters. Dr. Frederick Hoffman, of New York, who gathers statistics for the insurance magazine, Spectator, sees a bright future for the industry as long as the crime rate keeps up. And the outlook is that it will keep up.

Dr. Hoffman adds, though, that gangsters are particular people, demanding the best, accepting no substitutes. They want glass that will really turn a bullet, and often refuse to buy unless they can test it themselves.

If the glass will resist a shot from a .45 fired at a range of two feet it meets specifications. If not your real dyed-in-the-wool gunman won't fool with it.

"Safety first" is his motto.

It seems paradoxical to find gangsters promoting safety devices of any description, but ours, as has been remarked before, is a paradoxical country. A good lawyer, for example, will advise you to stay out of courts. A good doctor will often tell you that the last thing you need is a doctor. A good Senator will vote dry and drink wet—while a good bootlegger or even a bad one is seriously annoyed at all this talk of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment.

A puzzling place, the U. S. A. We don't understand it ourselves, sometimes.

An Experiment

Noble, But It Won't Work.

The Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, rector of historic Grace Church, New York, will not perform the marriage ceremony unless bride and groom sign a pledge to join the Church. Not HIS, necessarily, but some.

The pledge reads:

"For our own sakes and for the sake of the home we hope to establish, we will seek to associate ourselves for worship and fellowship with some Christian church in the community where we reside."

An interesting experiment, noble in purpose. Dr. Bowie correctly believes that fewer marriages would end in disaster if couples kept in touch with their churches, and gave more thought to religion than they do now.

The [illegible] won't work, of course. Those who will sign such a pledge had seen "Isn't that those least likely to need it. The others will find a [illegible] the shmoodating minister, or a justice of the peace, [illegible] change human nature.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Not So Red

We went down into the suburbs to pipe the Reds rioting on May Day.

"Bugs" Baer

We expected the situation to look like the top face on a totem pole. But we were as disappointed as a man whose nomination is being voted on by the Senate.

Of course, the cops were there with the vans to make it a wagon picnic.

Things were so quiet you could have heard a weak arch fall in a rubber boot.

In spite of the fact that the Reds refer to the police as Cossacks we never saw one of 'em dance.

The cops handled the meeting as easy as snapping off a chameleon's tail.

We have seen better riots in a telephone booth in the shopping district.

We have come to the conclusion that the Reds aren't as bad as they are rouged.

You've only got to watch 'em on Labor and May days.

Think of the people you've got to watch every day in the year.

A Communist prepares for his two riots a year like an amateur trains for his expense account.

Since he has been featured as the star attraction he knows that his public expects him to leap through the law's paper hoops like a live frog responding to hot butter.

And the Red is appreciative of attention. He reacts to public notice like a speakeasy piano responds to nickels.

So he does his cavortings and gyrating on May Day like a gazelle prancing through a barbed wire factory.

Then he lays off the rest of the summer in order to get in good, competitive shape for Labor Day.

He spends the other 363 days of the year yelling for work and avoiding the industrial end of the town.

There ain't a bad profession. We think we would join the Redsters if they promise to clip their gymnastics down to one day a year.

EMERGENT VITALISM

By Archibald Henderson

A truism of mathematics is that the whole is equal to the sum of its parts. But the biologists are beginning to discover that in the operation of evolution, the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. The synthesis of the parts often surpasses or exceeds this mere sum or additive resultant. The synthesis may, and indeed often does, become something recognizably novel. In certain cases, this synthesis may possess features markedly dissimilar from those of the elements and sub-groups which entered into its composition.

Unfortunately, science is not able to employ the prophetic instinct in determining the nature and qualities of the resulting or emergent wholes. A mere examination and catalogue of the properties of charcoal or sulphur or saltpeter, separately or in combinations or two, gives us no knowledge of the surprising qualities of gunpowder.

Even a knowledge of the properties of hydrogen and oxygen, separately, would not enable the scientist to predict the qualities and properties of water.

It is coming now to be believed that there is a connection of an intimate sort between hybridism and emergent evolution.

Possibly Darwin was the first to observe that by bringing together different germinal substances, and not merely by crossing, extra size and vigor were produced in hybrid plants and animals. Extensive, more or less uncalculating methods of hybridization have been employed and have produced successful and often extraordinary results.

These highly fruitful experiments of hybridization give a hint of the immense possibilities in this field, when the experiments shall be conducted with complete scientific control. Much may be accomplished by persistent, carefully conducted and closely observed projects in hybridization among varieties of the higher animals and plants.

Much has already been accomplished in the realm of horticulture. R. K. Nabours goes so far as to affirm: "It appears that most horticultural achievements have been attained by means of hybridization, either through man's intentional effort or by chance in nature.

"It is generally recognized that in all the higher and many lower forms of plants hybridization has performed a conspicuous part in the development of the limitless varieties found distributed among the almost infinite kinds of environment in which they live. Every important group, as cotton, wheat, corn, sorghum, all fruits, shrubs, trees, weeds, wild as well as cultivated flowers and vegetables—all are well known to be largely and, in many cases, wholly of hybrid origin.

"In most of them the distinguishing characteristics of the contributive races have become largely dissembled by the respective hybrid emergencies."

The field of hybridization opens up enormous possibilities, especially at state and federal experimental stations. And yet emergent evolution indicates the difficulties which must be surmounted.

A mule is not simply a combination or sum of the properties of ass and horse. Extraneous qualities emerge as the result of hybridization. The only way to determine these emergent resultants is by patient and endless experiment.

Consider, for example some of the promising experimental projects which have been proposed. The cultivation of double-purpose cattle is rich in possibilities, by hybridizing large beef-producing with high milk-producing cattle.

Another is the project of hybridizing high egg-laying with big meat chickens. Unfortunately the results, on the whole, have been both surprising and disappointing, of efforts to discover the secrets of hybridization of this type. Sometimes gains were effected; but they appeared to be accidental, and not the advantages which were aimed at.

But science will follow this alluring path, which holds out hope of probable rich future results.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD ∴

By Elsie Robinson

I've been following with interest, this Olga Edwards story. Not merely because I have a normal nose for nastiness, but also because I wonder how much longer we Americans will stand for this racket.

Olga, as, of course, you know, claims to have been done wrong by a person named Amster. This wrong wasn't merely a temporary inadvertence. It lasted for six years, with, one gathers, considerable cash consent from Olga. Four years ago a baby boy came into the picture. So did a $100,000 trust fund. The baby stayed in the picture, but recently the trust fund did a fade-out. Whereupon Olga grew obstreperous. Very! Hence the trial. And now a "cruel, hard-hearted Boston" jury has convicted Olga on the charge of extortion. And everybody is awfully sorry for her and is sending her money and great, gooey gobs of consolation.

That is, everybody but me. Personally, I'm all for that jury. And I herewith announce that Olga and her racket give me a pain in the neck.

Mind you, I'm no Puritan. But these love molls who do their stuff with kisses and use a baby as a cover up, are a disgrace to honest thieves.

There is nothing more pitiful than the betrayal of an innocent, sensitive, loving young girl. But innocent, sensitive, loving young girls don't go on getting themselves Betrayed 'n' Betrayed, year after year, at so much per. Nor can their damaged honor be cured by kopecks.

"But she did it for her little boy!" wail the sentimentalists.

She did not. If Olga Edwards had cared a hoot for that little boy—if she had even ordinary decency or compassion—she would not have dragged him through such a mire or so branded his future. There are just about 926,746,589 ways by which a mother can earn an honorable living for her baby. Spilling dirt in courts isn't one of them.

And even if Olga doesn't do a rap for extortion, she ought to do it for contributing to the lifelong humiliation and heartache of a pitiful little minor.

Olga, of course, isn't unique. There are mobs of molls in the same racket. Not all can produce a Dear Little Child as Exhibit A. Most of the girls just have damages. But even simple Damages can do wonders for a gal if she has the right sort of a shape and a well-picked jury. As a consequence, thousands of earnest young women are bending all their energies toward getting themselves Damaged by the Proper Party. After which, they have only to produce a few tears and the courts do the rest for them.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

By Sun, By Stars

By sunlight who can choose but be
As practical as all we see,
As commonplace as busy streets
Where the swift pulse of commerce beats?
Beneath the noonday's golden glare
How can one fail to be aware
Of the appeal of worldly things,
Which to each sense its message brings?

But, ah! by starlight who can fail
To note this lifting of the veil
That lets the flesh peer out, at last
Upon a universe more vast
Than day reveals, a fair demain
Without a flaw, without a stain?
By starlight who can fail to learn
The truths for which all souls must yearn?

Text For Today Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.—Psalm i:1.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

It is only found in a certain proportion of human beings (and, curiously enough, is stated to occur more often in men than women); but when present it is, as Darwin wrote, "a surviving symbol of the stirring times and dangerous days of his animal youth."

H. G. Wells

Again, the little fleshy fold in the inner angle of our eyes seems to have no function whatsoever; but in most lower vertebrates, including many mammals, such as the cats, this fold is a veritable third eyelid, which can be rapidly swept across the eye from one side to the other.

As further proof of the simian relationship of man it may be noted that apes and monkeys, too, have their third eyelid reduced to a vestige.

Our wisdom-teeth are on the way to becoming vestigial. In most of us they only appear between the ages of 20 and 25. In quite a number of people, however, they are never cut at all, but remain useless or even the cause of disagreeable inflammation within the gums.

Nor is any exception made by man to the animal practice of recapitulating the past of the race during individual development. We have the same family secrets in our embryonic cupboards as the rest of our mammalian relatives.

The gill-clefts, the tail and the furry coat with which our persons were once adorned have already been mentioned. We may add that the human tail is formed complete, with all the muscles for wagging it; later, as the tail itself fades into insignificance, the muscles degenerate or are turned to other uses.

The early human embryo has nostrils connected with the mouth by a deep groove on either side.

Sometimes, through a failure of development, this condition remains throughout life, and we call it hare-lip. It is a reminiscence of the way in which the nostrils were formed in our early fish-like ancestors, and you have only to look at a dog-fish or a skate to see that they still show this construction.

Similar abnormalities of development sometimes allow the prenatal hair to persist, giving us the dog-faced men and hairy women of our shows; or the embryonic tail forgets to shrink and a baby is born with a little pink tail like a sucking-pig's; or the closure of the gill-clefts is arrested and we have adult human beings with actual slits on the side of their neck, or with white patches of skin, marking the thin places where they closed just before birth.

Then there is the extraordinary capacity of the new-born human babe to support its own weight for several minutes at a time hanging by its hands alone; indeed, in most cases the child can hang by either hand singly.

This capacity persists for a month or so after birth, but then normally fades away, and only after several years is the child capable of such a feat.

All monkey and ape mothers travel through the branches with their babies. But as they need their own arms for traveling, the baby, even from birth, must have the capacity for holding on tight by its tiny hands to its mother's fur.

There can be no doubt that the presence of this power in human infants is a survival, now wholly useless, of what was once a matter of life and death.

It is interesting to find, as Mr. Kallen has demonstrated with his daughter, that if the baby be repeatedly stimulated by putting graspable objects into its hands, and tugging upwards when the little hands close around the object, capacity may be reawakened even after it has died out naturally, and may then be made to persist for many months.

The inborn, automatic nature of this power is shown by the fact that it was present in a child born without any forebrain (cerebrum), and persisted in full force until the defective infant died at eighteen days of age.

Another recapitulation, which only fades after birth, is the greater prehensile capacity of the human baby's foot, and the fact that its big toe is much more widely separated from the rest than a grown man's. Why should a baby's foot be half-way to an ape's if there is no real relationship between ape and man?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 10.—Rialto barnstormers are facing an almost total eclipse. Stock companies all over the land have disbanded and the leading play bureau that furnished the scripts for these efforts is about to hang up shutters due to poor business.

Until the silent and talkie movies made such inroads, the stock company was an institution in almost every first-class city. The leading man's photograph adorned thousands of dresser mirrors and leading ladies stirred sentimental longings among local beaux.

The guest star idea was a knockout in many large cities. In this the actual star of a New York success was featured in the play he or she made famous and the rest of the cast was selected from professionals "at liberty" with a sprinkling of home talent.

It was a brave band of troupers who comprised the small repertory companies—the last of the vanishing troubadors. They toured the tanks with a handful of cheaply dyed muslin scenery, often walking from town to town. Most of the plays were pirated from Broadway hits.

Pirates sent stenographers to first nights in New York to take down the action and dialogue verbatim. Within a week after the show had registered a success, a hundred and one "rep" shows would be producing it under another name in the town halls of whistle stops.

Few of the troupers ever saw New York. Or really cared too. They were amiable and shiftless nomads, puffed with a sort of divine afflatus. Some oddly enough grew rich. Companies such as Ole Olson, The Missouri Girl and The James Boys in Missouri played the same towns with the same players year after year.

Opera houses over the hardware store are no more at the crossroads. There is no place to put on a show. Movies and talkies are an improvement. But will never provide the thrill of watching a leading man in a moth-eaten fur coat and a leading lady with a soiled white poodle step from the 10:45. Them there was days, boys!

Over the peep hole in the Gallipolic opera house was painted: "We know our house is rotten, but how is your show?" That was our answer to city slickers.

* * *

New York is a constant succession of free entertainment. With the museums, art exhibits, food shows and such it is possible to go to places and see things every night in the week without admission charges. Then, too, there are the jewelry auction sales with flip talking auctioneers, the "For Men Only Talks" on Seventh avenue, the gallery of the Grand Central, the soap box orators at Columbus Circle, the East Side push cart markets, the Acquarium, Central Park Zoo and Paul Whiteman's zebra-striped sox.

A big dressmaking salon has yanked down its sign: "The custome is always right." A lady stuck a foot through an expensive frock while trying it on. At the suggestion of a settlement, she pointed to the sign and exited laughingly.

Wherever there was a cluster of men at a party this spring the core of the cluster would be Lily Damita. With her stage appearance she proved the greatest heart-smasher since the sway of Lily Langtry and hundreds of feminine charmers prayed for her early return to Hollywood.

Miss Damita was really showered with mash notes none of which she answered—a cute custom of Hollywood picture stars. Cinema celebrities believe that once you answer a fan letter the interest dies. Keep 'em guessing and let common courtesy go hang is the idea.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

What makes you so peeved when another gives you an adverse criticism?

How do you expect to learn your trade or your lessons if none is set over you to correct errors?

You don't like to be told that you are wrong.

You'd rather play the baby act and be condoned on your mistakes.

What is an overseer paid for if not to say when things are wrong?

There is nothing to say when things are right.

Your own satisfaction at things well done ought to be your best pay when you have accomplished a feat or a service as it should be done.

You don't have to be told when you have done well.

You know it yourself.

But if the mistake is not to be repeated some one must be on the job to point out mistakes and prod and push till things are right.

If you don't want to be prodded keep ahead of your superior.

You would not pay a foreman who agreed to let his men put over poor work that broke your reputation for dependable goods.

Well, then, show that you are in line to make a good foreman yourself by taking suggestions and working on them without argument and cheerfully.
